How Did It Seem?
Two Constitutions Mended
A Rich Hog Pen
This Widow Writes Well

—By Arthur Brisbane—

(Copyright, 1920)

How did it seem yesterday to go to the polls with your wife, or your mother, or your sister, or all three, and vote, after having talked it over for several days beforehand?

Was it such a terrible thing to admit that women are human beings, fit to share in the government that rules them?

As this is written, with horns blowing after dark on election evening, there is reason to assume that Harding is elected. Admirers of President Wilson will be glad to know that pressure and the heavy load will be taken from him. All citizens hope that he will rebuild his constitution and live through many years of health and strength.

And all hope also that the United States will rebuild its constitution, seriously damaged during the war, by absolute contempt shown by those in authority for freedom of speech and of the press.

It is announced that if nobody will buy Hog Island, Hog Island will be closed.

It always was a worthless spot from the government's point of view, but a very fat, rich hog pen for the hogs that managed it and squandered there seventy millions of the people's money.

Eleven hundred millions squandered and stolen without results in aircraft, seventy millions on Hog Island, a hundred millions there, two hundred millions here.

Was ever a rich and gullible country so thoroughly looted by well-meaning stupidity, managed cunningly by one dollar a year patriotears?

What a God's blessing to be rid of that gang!

Rachel H. Minshall, widow with three children, who runs the postoffice at Abbeville, South Carolina, wants to write for newspapers. She ought to get the chance very easily. Here's an extract from her letter:

I have in mind several inches each day of parallel reading. By, for instance, two weeks ago had an old man, a colored man, died on the public highway in the bottom of a wagon with no springs in it. He had been carried sixty miles from one poorhouse to another, and from one house to another, looking for a place to lay his head.

His death was caused by the long trip, combined with old age and feeble health.

We have in the same week a report of a great jubilee, held Greenville, S. C., where the dignitaries of the church assemble to do honor, an honor well deserved, to one of themselves.

The wonderful ceremonies and the robes make one think of old Bible times. Your very mind can see purple and gold.

Then we have an official report of the charitable institutions of the State—an old woman dying of cancer on the floor on a pallet made of old worn-out quilts.

By her side was a bowl of soft-cooked rice, with flies walking around the bowl. The old woman told the officer:

"Somehow, I can't get no liking for my food. I can remember once some sardines and some orackers tasted mighty good to me. And I believe I could eat that, but they can only give corn pone, bacon and soft rice."

An old question: "Who will hold the stakeholder?" From the Milledgeville Prison in Georgia a young lady prisoner, Juanita Weaver, escaped. The lady is twenty-one years old, "and a blonde." J. W. Gans, guard in the women's prison, escaped with her.

It is all wrong, yet of the ten million people before whose eyes this column goes each day certainly nine million will be pleased to know Juanita first captured the guard, then took him with her.

In Mexico a foreigner, Benton, was murdered. His widow is to get ten thousand dollars damages from the Mexican government and two and a half dollars a day besides to live on.

Your surprise vanishes when you are told that Benton was an ENGLISHMAN. Several hundred American widows have claims against the Mexican government, but they will not get ten thousand dollars. They will get soft soap, fed to them through our State Department.

Father Stryzelecki, of St. Stanislaus' Church, died two years ago. The judge of the Surrogate Court, having examined the account, now shows that he stole nearly $400,000 from church funds. Fortunately the archbishop will be able to recover much of this money.

Suppose some A. P. A. bigot should say: "This dishonesty comes of being brought up in a religious school where too much religion is taught." You would say the A. P. A. man was a vicious fool to make such a suggestion.

You may say the same thing of any man who says that the American public school, conducted in accordance with the American constitution, causes dishonesty because it is not a religious school.

Every man must forty is a "cracked glass." You handle a cracked glass carefully to make it last. Hard usage will break it.

John F. Carroll exercised in the athletic club, then died. He was exercising a cracked glass, his weakened constitution. His mother, alive, is ninety-two. She never went to an athletic club to see how much an old heart could stand in the way of rough usage.

'SOLID SOUTH' SMASHED

TENNESSEE FOR HARDING

The hardest blow received by the Democrats in the general avalanche of Republican victory yesterday was the loss of Tennessee, the breaking of the "Solid South" for the first time since 1868, when Grant received the State's electoral vote over Seymour.

Incomplete but fairly accurate returns show Harding and Coolidge have carried Tennessee over Cox and Roosevelt by 5,000 to 10,000 votes.

Governor A. H. Roberts also was overcome in the Tennessee Republican landslide, and Colonel Alf. Taylor's majority over him will be 10,000 votes or more.

Figures available early this forenoon, however, made certain that Senator Warren G. Harding and Governor Calvin Coolidge swept at least thirty-four States with unprecedented pluralities and carried to victory with them twenty-three Republican Governors, a majority of at least twelve in the United States Senate and a preponderantly Republican House of Representatives.

The electoral votes of only two States appeared to be in doubt today—those of Arizona and New Mexico, each with three. Returns in these were so slow and the contest so close that it may take several days to determine the result.

2.75 BEER VOTE WINS IN BOSTON

New City Council Bill is Rejected; Majorities Average 22,000

The two-platoon system for firemen and the project to increase the Boston City Council to fifteen members were decisively defeated in Boston, according to returns from all but a few precincts.

The question of permitting the sale of 2.75 beer and wine was endorsed in Boston, however, by a vote of 35,675 in favor to 62,276 against.

The Boston electorate displayed their distate for the two-platoon system by a vote of 48,277, and the City Council increase was defeated by 78,033 to 55,195.

The two-platoon system in particular was severely dealt with, only nine of the city's wards returning majorities in its favor: These were 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 9, 10, 11 and 13, where the firemen and their friends had been active up to and including election day.

An increase in the number of City Councillors was favored in only eight wards, consisting of 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 8, 12 and 13. Ward 5, the Lomasney stronghold, gave it a vote of 2,855 to 935. This ward also gave a good-sized vote for the two-platoon system.

The beer referendum was the most popular of the three, receiving a majority of more than 23,000.

Ward 4, James Donovan's district, normally a Democratic stronghold went Republican by nearly 600. Wards 14 and 15 in Roxbury; 22 in Dorchester and 26 in Brighton, also Democratic ordinarily, gave majorities to the Republican presidential candidates.

The Republican candidates carried every ward from 1 to 8 inclusive, except Charlestown and one ward in East Boston.

VOTE PROBE IN TAGUE'S DISTRICT

Fraud Charged in Ward 13 Following Race War of Ballots

Investigation of alleged election frauds in Ward 13, following the bitter racial fight, and a recount there as well as in the Tenth Congressional District, where Congressman Peter F. Teague leads by 1,000 votes with a precinct in Martin M. Lomasney's Ward 5 still to be accounted for by the latest returns, were among the sensational developments promised to come as an aftermath to the giant Republican tidal wave which swept Massachusetts and the Nation.

The vote in the Tenth Congressional District, with the one precinct still to be heard from, was:

Tague—14,190.
Maguire—13,179.
Tague's lead—1,011.

PRECINCT STILL OUT.

The precinct still out is No. 6, situated in the heart of the Lomasney district. Last year, in the gubernatorial contest, it cast 600 votes. Woman registration and increased interest in the political outcome was

GIRL KILLED BY TROLLEY AT NATICK

Miss Anna Dugan, aged 18, a domestic employed in the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. She stepped directly in the path of the on-coming car when she became confused.

MAGUIRE DEMANDS RECOUNT IN TENTH

James E. Maguire, Republican opponent of Congressman Peter F. Tague, today took out a petition for a recount of the vote for Congressman in the Tenth Congressional District, although one precinct is missing.

SOMERVILLE MAN SHOT DEAD

Francis Bonanno of No. 36 Linden street, Somerville, was shot dead today following a quarrel at Hampshire and Davis streets, Cambridge. Joseph Bonanno, 24 years old, of Prospect street, Cambridge, the victim's brother-in-law, was arrested after a chase.

Mr. Hearst Says:

Mr. Wilson wanted a referendum on his League of Nations, and he has had it.

He now knows, and certain other foolish politicians now know that the American people prefer to follow the patriotic precepts of Washington, Jefferson, Madison, Monroe, Jackson, Lincoln and Cleveland rather than the selfish ambition and visionary theories of Mr. Wilson who, as he himself has said, "Gets his news and views of the world from the weekly edition of the London Times."

This overwhelming election is not a victory for the Republican party, although the Republican party will probably make the mistake of thinking that it is.

It is not a defeat for the Democratic party, because there is no Democratic party.

Bryan was right when he said: "At the end of Wilson's term of office there will be no Democratic party. There may be a Wilson party, but there will be no Democratic party."

This historic election is purely and simply a repudiation by sterling American citizens of the Wilson party and that party's pro-British un-American policies.

The nation has returned to Americanism. The Americanism of the founders of the Republic.

Our country is no longer a crown colony. It is our own dear, independent United States—the land of the free. And for this we should celebrate Thanksgiving Day, which is coming, more deeply and devoutly than we have ever celebrated that great American holiday in our lives before.

AMERICAN GIVES NEWS FIRST

Announces Harding's Election 42 Minutes Before Any Other Boston Newspaper

The Boston American announced the election of Warren G. Harding to the Presidency of the United States at 7.58 p. m. This was forty-two minutes before any other paper in the city reached the streets with the result of the national election.

Thousands of Bostonians who thronged the streets during the early evening eagerly waiting for news of the election returns were served by the American carrying the most complete tabulation of the result in New England and throughout the country.

Extra editions containing the latest in the returns were distributed throughout the metropolitan district as fast as the presses could turn them out, in every case beating every other Boston paper by from forty minutes to an hour.

This feat was accomplished as the result of most careful preparations. Correspondents in every section of the New England States kept in constant touch with the American office.

Members of the staff stationed at advantageous points flashed the Boston results to the editorial rooms.

Press associations furnished lightning-like service from the country at large and editorial, composing room and press room staffs co-operated to get the papers to the people of the city in the fastest possible time.

As a result the American was first.

No other Boston paper gave election service as fast and so complete.

STATE CARRIED BY 400,000

Rush of Women to Polls Gives Unprecedented G. O. P. Victory in Massachusetts

By an unheard of plurality of 400,000, dwarfing into insignificance figures on any previous election, Harding and Coolidge carried Massachusetts, according to latest returns.

These remarkable figures, transcending the wildest dreams of Republican enthusiasts, were based on returns from 306 towns out of 316 and with Boston and all but three cities accounted for.

They were largely accounted for by the tremendous rush of women to the polls, bringing the total up to more than 900,000, or 400,000 more than were registered for all gubernatorial candidates in 1918.

Previous records established by McKinley and Governor Coolidge were shattered by the tremendous tide of Republican ballots, which NATION-WIDE SWEEP.

The Harding-Coolidge ticket carried every State north of Mason-Dixon line and every State west of the Mississippi River, with the exception of Arkansas, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Texas and possibly the two doubtful States of the Mexican border.

By capturing Tennessee the Republicans broke into the Solid South.

On the face of today's general returns, Harding's popular plurality is estimated anywhere from 4,000,000 to 7,000,000 votes, possibly more, and the Ohio Senator seemed assured of having at least 343 votes in the electoral college. It is the greatest victory ever scored by a Republican candidate for the Presidency, far exceeding that of Theodore Roosevelt in 1904. Roosevelt had a popular plurality of 2,541,191 and had 336 votes in the electoral college.

Staggering pluralities were run up in many States, due to the addition of millions of women votes. The Republican national ticket appears to have captured most of the new votes.

New York gave Harding a plurality

HARDING TO COOLIDGE:

My heartiest congratulations over the great Republican victory to which your strength added so materially. You are to expect to play a full part in the coming Republican administration. Good wishes.

COOLIDGE TO HARDING:

EIGHT INJURED IN PENNSYLVANIA WRECK

Latrobe, Pa., Nov. 3.—The Pennsylvania Railroad's Pittsburgh-New York night express was derailed at Bradenville, near here, by a broken rail early today. Eight passengers were badly injured and a score of others received minor injuries. One of the overturned coaches struck an abutment of an overhead bridge and knocked it from beneath the bridge, one end of the structure falling on the coach.

BURLESON EXPLAINS SUCCESS OF HARDING

Washington, Nov. 3.—The biggest cause for the Democratic defeat was the failure of the Democrats to foresee and predict in advance the slump in the price of farm products and place the responsibility therefor on the Republican Congress, according to Albert Sydney Burleson, postmaster-general and political warhorse of the Wilson cabinet.

estimated roundly at 1,500,000. Pennsylvania, a Republican stronghold, (three-quarters of a million; Illinois, 800,000; Michigan, 400,000; California, 500,000; Massachusetts, 300,000, and Ohio, the home State of both candidates, gave Harding a victory roundly estimated at 350,000.

The Republicans succeeded in turning back into the Republican column every Northern and Western State that Woodrow Wilson carried over Charles Evans Hughes in 1916. Four years ago, the Central and Far West elected Wilson. Yesterday those same States rolled up impressive majorities for Harding.

REDEEMED 14 STATES.

Fourteen States which in 1916 were carried by Wilson and which Harding carried yesterday were: California, Colorado, Idaho, Kansas, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Maryland, Nevada, New Hampshire, North Dakota, Utah, Washington and Wyoming besides Tennessee.

Even in the other southern States, the Democratic majorities showed in many cases heavy declines from 1916. Where Texas four years ago gave Wilson a handsome majority of 211,-915, it was generally estimated today that Cox's majority will be many thousands less. Republicans even had strong hopes today of electing their men in several Texas Congressional fights. Other Southern States showed like decreases.

The thirteen States that Governor Cox appealed today to have certainly carried are: Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, Oklahoma, Kentucky, South Carolina, Texas and Virginia.

Republican national headquarters here were literally flooded with telegrams today and some of these would not concede the Democrats the so-called border states of Kentucky and Oklahoma until the last vote was counted. On the face of returns, however, they appeared to be safely in the Democratic column.

BIG SOCIALIST VOTE.

While definite figures were not available today it appeared that the Socialist popular vote is going to be considerable, as compared with former years. In New York city alone, Eugene V. Debs, the prisoner candidate, rolled up nearly 150,000 votes.

Figures on the Prohibition-Labor ticket headed by Parley P. Christensen of Utah, were not available this forenoon.

SENATE WITH HARDING.

The margin of twelve by which Republican leaders will control the Senate will be sufficiently wide to insure that Mr. Harding receives adequate support for whatever domestic policies are laid down by him. It was declared at Republican national headquarters. Even if certain Republican Senators of pronounced independence of action and views should offer opposition to the Harding administration on domestic questions Mr. Harding will still have the support of a comfortable working majority in the upper chamber of the new, the Sixty-seventh Congress.

It is expected, owing to pressing legislative requirements of the country, that President-elect Harding will call the new Congress in special or extra session in March or April next, or soon after his inauguration on March 4.

The new Senate will convene automatically, in accordance with recognized custom, immediately after Mr. Harding takes office, to give consideration to whatever Cabinet and other appointments to office he may make.

Mr. Harding will dominate the new Senate sufficiently, it was said, to insure the confirmation by the Senate of his appointees.

While the Republicans will not command without support from the Democratic side the two-thirds vote necessary for the ratification of a foreign treaty or pact, Republican leaders expressed confidence that the result of the "great and solemn referendum" on the League of Nations as constituted at Versailles will bring once a number of Democratic Senators in their attitude toward the Harding foreign policies.

It is believed by several prominent Republican leaders who were closely associated with Mr. Harding in the development of his sweepingly successful campaign that ratification of the treaty of Versailles and the League of Nations covenant with safeguarding American reservations even more pronounced than the famous Lodge ones, is not improbable soon after the Harding administration gets under way.

SEEK EARLY PEACE.

While Senator Harding is committed against the people "going in" the League of Nations as advocated by President Wilson, and favors a new "world association of nations," Republican and Democratic Senators who alike want the United States re-established on a peace basis as early as possible, are of the opinion that the Harding administration will soon find a solution of the treaty and league muddle which will be acceptable to foreign nations as well as to this country.

Thirty-four Senators were elected yesterday in thirty-two States, two seats made vacant by deaths being filled in addition to the thirty-two, or one-third of the Senate membership required by law.

The Republicans control the present Senate by the narrow margin of one vote, Senator Truman Newberry of Michigan decided not to occupy his seat until his contested election case is decided by the United States Supreme Court. The tribunal is expected to decide whether or not Newberry, charged with violation of the Corrupt Practices Act, is entitled to his seat before the new Senate convenes.

Even if its decision should be adverse Newberry would be certain to be replaced by the Republican appointee of the Republican Governor of Michigan.

MAJORITY OF TWELVE.

The election yesterday of five new Republican Senators and the elimination of as many Democratic Senators will increase the present Republican majority of two in the Senate in the event the Newberry case is disposed of, to twelve, at least. The new Republican Senators are, according to the latest returns, Samuel Shortridge, of California, who is reported to have defeated Senator James D. Phelan, Democrat, for re-election; Samuel D. Nicholson, who is to replace Senator Charles S. Thomas, a Democrat, who ran independently with Tully Scott as the unsuccessful Democratic-non-partisan candidate; former Gov. Frank B. Goodin, of Idaho, who is believed to have defeated Senator John F. Nugent, Democrat, for re-election; E. F. Ladd, of North Dakota, who is defeating H. P. Perry, will replace Senator Asle J. Gronna, Republican, beaten for the Republican nomination on his "war record"; and Gov. Peter Norbeck, of South Dakota, who defeated E. S. Stewart, his Democratic opponent, and replaces Senator Edwin S. Johnson, who was not a candidate for re-election.

DRYS MAKE GAINS

The drys apparently have won out in a majority of the districts where prohibition was the issue and have succeeded in returning the two chief exponents of prohibition in the House—Representative Volstead of Minnesota, father of the prohibition enforcement law, and Representative Randall, of California. Besides these two, the drys have also succeeded in electing Harrison, of Virginia, Zihlman, of Maryland and Nealey and Kehels, of West Virginia, all of whom were opposed by alleged wet candidates. Among those elected to the House against the opposition of the drys are Beal, of Virginia; Goldsborough, Blakeney and Linthicum, of Maryland; Pou, of North Carolina and Porter and Brooks, of Pennsylvania.

Returns thus far do not show a sufficient change in the complexion of the House to forecast any great liberality on the prohibition issue in the Sixty-seventh Congress.

Gains made in the House by the Republicans were as follows: California, 2; Connecticut, 1; Illinois, 2; Maryland, 1; Massachusetts, 2; Michigan, 1; Montana, 1; New Jersey, 5; New York, 7; Ohio, 8; Pennsylvania, 5; South Dakota, 1; Utah, 1; West Virginia, 1; Wisconsin, 1. Democrats gained one in Indiana and one in Oklahoma according to present returns.

BIG G. O. P. GAINS IN HOUSE.

Latest returns indicate a net gain of thirty-three in the Republican membership of the House with a majority that may be over 100.

Based on returns in and the indicated trend in States where the result is not yet final, it appears that the House of Representatives in the Sixty-seventh Congress will be constituted approximately as follows: Republicans, 273; Democrats, 159; Independents, 2; Prohibitionists, 1. This estimate, while not final, would give the Republicans a majority of 111. The present majority of the Republicans is 38.

expected to increase substantially the vote in that precinct this year. The remainder of the ward went for Maguire by nearly three to one.

Tague, before going to bed this morning with the assurance that he had won by more than 1,000, issued a statement attacking Lomasney as a "treacherous foe," "underhanded," "unreliable" and "deceitful" and said that his victory had suspended the Mahatma's death-knell in politics.

In Ward 13, where the racial issue had been sharply drawn and where fraud had bitterly been charged, Matthew Washington Bullock, colored, the old Dartmouth football player, ran but 157 votes behind Representative Timothy J. Driscoll, Democratic, and less than 100 votes in the rear brought up Dr. Andrew Berkeley Lattimore, also colored.

Lattimore and Bullock had charged that a fake letter from "The Massachusetts Elections Commission" was sent out on the eve of election with the purpose of frightening colored men and women away from the polls.

The letters accused the colored voters of false registration and said they would be punished for violation of the election laws if they attempted to vote. District Attorney Pelletier, the Boston Police Department and Attorney-General Allen are among the officials to whom Bullock and Lattimore have already complained and demanded an investigation.

It was said today that the close vote will stimulate their demand for a probe and that they doubtlessly will ask for a recount.

The vote in the Thirteenth Representative District was:

Republicans, Frank J. Burke, 3,072; Representative Timothy Driscoll, 3,012; Bullock, 2,855; Lattimore, 2,698. Burke and Driscoll are Democrats, Bullock and Lattimore Republicans.

ton. They also carried wards from 19 to 26 inclusive. At the last presidential election the Republican nominee carried only seven wards in Boston, and Governor, in his last campaign carried only eleven Boston wards.

Nearly 40,000 women, as well as several thousand newly-registered men, voted, the majority of the new voters casting their ballots for the Republican ticket. Thousands of regular Democrats deserted their party, however, this being particularly evident in Wards 5 and 6.

With both the Republican and Democratic nominations, John A. Peters, Boston, re-elected sheriff of Suffolk County for a four-year term by a practically unanimous vote.

Joseph Wells, Republican, was re-elected to the Senate from the Fifth Suffolk District, comprising Wards 7 and 8 of the Back Bay, with an overwhelming majority over Democratic nominee, George T. Daly.

Martin Hayes, Republican, was re-elected to the House from Ward 23, and in Ward 3, Charlestown, John F. Harvey, independent candidate for the House, defeated Hyman H. Brennan, Democrat. The other representative elected from the ward was William H. Winnett, Democrat.

swept the entire State ticket into office and carried Boston for the second time in its history.

President McKinley carried the State by 173,000 in 1896, and last Fall the new Vice-President, seeking re-election as Governor, received a plurality of 125,000 votes.

Four years ago President Wilson was given a plurality of 18,961 votes by Boston, but yesterday the Republicans carried the city by 20,000.

In the turmoil of the balloting, two of the four Democratic congressmen were eliminated, and the Republicans elected seven out of the eight members of the Governor's Council. They also captured an additional seat or two in the State Senate and increased their lead in the House.

While more than 80 per cent. of the total registered votes of the State were cast, indicating that practically all the women on the voting list had balloted, a comparatively small vote was polled by Mrs. Alice Cram, candidate for State Auditor on the Democratic ticket.

Morgan Leads for West Virginia Governorship

By International News Service.

Charleston, W. Va., Nov. 3.—When Democratic and Republican State headquarters each stopped the compilation of returns this morning it was apparent that Senator Harding had carried West Virginia and that the race for the Governorship was close between Morgan (R) and Koontz (D) with chances favoring the Republican ticket.

Although only a few scattering returns from a few counties had been received at that hour, owing to the difficulties of communication in this mountainous State, Democrats were generally disposed to concede the election to Morgan.

Harding, Spencer and Hyde Sweep Missouri

By International News Service.

Kansas City, Mo., Nov. 3.—Missouri today was back in the Republican fold, Senator Harding having carried the State by 50,000 majority.

The tremendous sweep of votes toward Harding apparently carried the bulk of the Republican State ticket into office including Arthur M. Hyde for Governor. Hyde's lead, however, is uncertain and the final tabulation may unseat him in favor of John M. Atkinson, the Democratic nominee.

Seldon P. Spencer, however, is assured of re-election to the United States Senate over Breckinridge Long, a pro-League Democrat. Three Supreme Court Judges and a Court of Appeals judgeship have also been named by the Republicans.

COOLIDGE GRATEFUL TO BOSTON AMERICAN FOR ITS 'TRUE AMERICANISM'

I am deeply grateful to the Boston American for the effective service it has given to the cause of true Americanism. —Calvin Coolidge, Governor of Massachusetts and Vice-President Elect of the United States.

ELECTION RECALLS ROMANCE

Mrs. Channing H. Cox Met Governor-Elect on Visit to Manchester, N. H.

Once, not so very many years ago, a girl of sixteen, with braided hair hanging down her back, went up from her home town on Cape Cod to visit a girl friend in Manchester, N. H. On the street one day the two encountered a young man friend of the hostess. Introductions followed.

Next January that young man will be inaugurated Governor of Massachusetts, and that young girl, now Mrs. Channing H. Cox, will become the "First Lady of the Commonwealth."

It was not until some seven or eight years after their first meeting that the marriage took place. When the news of our Bay State Cox's election was flashed forth, this word came from the girl friend of Mrs. Cox's schooldays: "Little did I think at that time that I was introducing May Young and a future Governor of Massachusetts."

"May Young," as she was to her girlhood friends, was born in Wellfleet, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Josiah C. Young. Her Cape Cod and Mayflower ancestry is still the subject of occasional teasing on the part of her husband. He rallied her on it today, when friends were congratulating them on the Republican victory. Mrs. Cox retorted:

"Well, what about being born in Manchester, N. H.?"

Mrs. Young, mother of the Governor's lady-elect, intervened.

"There, there," said she; "Cape Cod folk have sand in their shoes, and New Hampshire folk granite. What's the difference?"

Both Mr. and Mrs. Cox were scarcely more smiling and confident today than they were yesterday. Neither had felt any doubt of the outcome of the election.

MRS. COX PRETTY WOMAN.

Mrs. Cox looked as fresh and unruffled as though she had been spending the past few months in the quiet community life of her home town instead of in the whirlwind atmosphere of a political campaign. A extremely pretty woman is she, with extraordinary charm and graciousness of manner; smart in costume without any hint of extravagant fashion; content ever her husband's newly conferred distinction, without being in the least fluttered by it.

She ha shdoe-gray eyes, soft brown hair that parts in a graceful wave over each ear, and a very trim, slender figure. She wore a gown with a black satin, a fur-trimmed wrap and small hat to match.

"But we're tired," admitted the present Lieutenant-Governor.

The congratulations have been the only excitement; the election hasn't been in any doubt."

One member of the family, strange to state, is totally indifferent to the honor that has descended upon the House of Cox. This is Nancy, not quite five years old, whose birthday will be celebrated this month. To Nancy, with blone Dutch haircut, dainty little bare knees above white half-hose, tiny dark coat and black velvet "tam," the Governorship is still nothing but "Daddy." She did, however, evidently feel a certain gala quality in the atmosphere, for when her father and mother were about to start for downtown with Mrs. Young in The latter's pretty little town car, Nancy demanded an ice-cream cone.

WANTS ICE CREAM CONE.

"Just one," she stipulated. "I'll only ask for one vanilla."

But from that on she was not to be diverted. As for gubernatorial honors, she is unimpressed. What a five-year-old could do to discourage a photographer and a "movie man," standing on the steps of the Cox home at No. 89 Fenway to "snap" the future Governor and his Lady, Nancy did.

BRITISH LAMENT LEAGUE AS LOST

Harding's Election Seen as Return to 'America First' Policy

By International News Service.

London, Nov. 3.—"America intends to let the rest of th world sink or swim as it may," said the Star in commenting today upon the result of the election in the United States. It continued:

"The United States is tired of war. Europe, the Versailles treaty, President Wilson and all that President Wilson represents. All German and Irish enemies of England represented the League of Nations as an English dodge to entrap the United States. And so participation of the great republic in the pacification of the world is greatly delayed."

The caption on the Star's editorial was: "America First."

The Globe declared that the election of Senator Harding is a serious setback to the supporters of the League of Nations. The Globe brands the League as "a fine but futile conception." It adds:

"Without America the League has no authority at all." The Globe welcomed the defeat of Governor Cox because, it declared, "Governor Cox has pledged to interfere in Irish affairs in a way that England could not and would not have brooked." The Globe concluded:

"He (Governor Cox) returns to obscurity. It is a source of satisfaction. His offer to meddle in our affairs proved a tactical mistake of such magnitude that he suffered defeat unprecedented in American history."

NOISY NIGHT FOR HARDING

Kept Up Until 2 A. M. by Neighbors Celebrating; Surprised at Size of Vote

Marion, O., Nov. 3.—It was a tired but happy, President-elect of the United States, who awoke late today at his green painted home on Mount Vernon avenue, Marion.

Enthusiastic neighbors, jangling cowbells, women twirling rattles, boys beating drums and all anxious to shake hands, made it impossible for Senator Warren G. Harding to get to bed until early today. But he would not have it otherwise, for he enjoyed every minute of it. Also Mrs. Harding.

At midnight, when informed of the returns, she exclaimed: "Oh, I thought it was only about ten o'clock."

Election day and his birthday marked the beginning of a new epoch in the Senator's life.

An hour after he had issued his first statement in the American public he and Mrs. Harding went to his campaign headquarters next door and there, in the glare of intense lights, read additional returns and congratulatory telegrams, while photographers clicked their cameras.

Until early today neighbors came with the children to express congratulations and invariably the President-to-be greeted them by their first names and made them feel as comfortable as old shoes. At 2 a. m. callers were going and coming at the Harding home.

Senator Harding frankly expected to win, but he did not expect such a landslide. That was a happy surprise for him.

Today he was busy reading and answering messages of congratulations which flooded his desk from all parts of the country. He was also interested in further election results which were furnished to him by special press association wires.

AUTOS IN COLLISION, PEDESTRIAN IS HURT

Reginald Squires of No. 244 Massachusetts avenue, Arlington, while operating an automobile at the corner of Bromfield and Washington streets today, collided with another machine and then struck and knocked down a pedestrian according to the police. The victim, Michael Modanne, 73 years old, of No. 1421 Columbus avenue, was taken to the Relief Hospital with contusions of the left knee and back.

HARDING GETS RETURNS BY UNIVERSAL SERVICE

Marion, O., Nov. 3.—Senator Harding was supplied throughout the night with Universal Service returns from a direct wire laid into the press house immediately adjoining the Harding home. When shown Universal Service dispatches recording Kansas, Illinois and Massachusetts in the Republican column Senator Harding said, "This is great. I believe it shows the trend."

NEW LONDON CARPENTER CRUSHED UNDER AUTO

New London, Ct., Nov. 3.—While on his way to work in Deep River, Frederick Kuhrel, aged fifty, a carpenter, was killed instantly when his auto turned turtle near the Birch Mill at Essex, twenty miles from here. The accident resulted when the steering gear of the auto went wrong due to a loose bolt. Knittel is survived by a widow and two sons.

HERE ARE 2 DEMOCRATS WHO MAY WIN OUT

Manchester, N. H., Nov. 3.—Late returns from cities indicate that Sheriff O'Dowd, Democrat, and County Solicitor Timothy F. O'Connor, Democrat, may win in Hillsborough County. The rest of the ticket is Republican.

COOLIDGE SEES 'END OF WORDS'

Rejoices That America Will Enter on Period of True National Honor

Vice-President Elect Coolidge made the following statement:

It is with a great deal of gratitude that I have seen by the incoming returns the extent of the victory and have realized its source. While I rejoice in its great proportions I rejoice even more in the nature of the support we have received.

It means the end of a period which has seemed to substitute words for things, and the beginning of a period of real patriotism and true national honor. It means a return to the Constitution, an end of extravagance, and a government by the people at home. Abroad it means the end of all ambiguous and visionary schemes and the beginning of a recognition of the real and true world relationship—whether based on the proposed league or some new agreement is immaterial—by which there may be conference among nations and development of law, which are the sole avenue to an abiding peace.

This has been the Republican policy, voiced by its record, its platform, its candidate, and now endorsed by the people. I believe there will be a return of industrial progress.

The great confidence in the leadership exhibited by Senator Harding, which has been steadily increasing, has been shown to be warranted by the result of the election and will be further justified by his administration.

I cannot commend too much his conduct of the campaign. It has been magnificent. I am deeply appreciative of the vote of Massachusetts. It is needless to say I offer my thanks to all who have contributed to the great result, the National, State and local committees of men and women.

To the women of the nation is due a new debt of gratitude. And finally, I want to express my appreciation of the great courtesy the press of both parties has extended to me. The issue was above parties. The victory cannot be designated by any other word than American.

Mrs. Coolidge Grateful to Bay State Women Voters

Mrs. Calvin Coolidge made the following statement to the American:

"This has been my first experience in taking part in an election and I am gratified at the result. I know Senator Harding is a great campaigner, because he is a man of such fine, true character. That stands out in all of his speeches, and I am sure that he will make a great President. But I am equally sure from the reports of those who have had the good fortune to visit Marion that the impression Mrs. Harding has made on her guests has spread all over the country and made the people explain that they wanted her to be the first lady of the land.

"The women of Massachusetts, under the leadership of Mrs. Bird, have given our cause wonderful support. I am thankful to all who have helped to secure it, to our Women especially.

FRENCH WAR CROSS FOR WILLIAMS INSTRUCTOR

Williamstown, Nov. 3.—In recognition of bravery in the Somme section in France, in September, 1914, when he, though wounded, led a squad of French troops against the Germans, Albert L. Cru, instructor of French at Williams College, has just been awarded a Croix de Guerre. The award was delayed, owing to inability to locate Mr. Cru, who transferred from the French to the British army and later to American forces.

GLOVE CLEW IN AUTO DEATH

Methuen Officials Offer $100 Reward for Arrest of Mrs. Timson's Slayer

Methuen, Nov. 3.—A reward of $100 was offered by City Marshal Nimmo for information which will lead to the arrest and conviction of the autoist who is alleged to have struck and killed Mrs. Harriet A. Timson, aged fifty-three, of No. 181 North Tyler street, while she was walking on North Lowell street, Monday night.

While no one has been found who witnessed the accident, the police are confident a speeding autoist killed the woman. A bloody glove found near where her mangled remains were discovered is the only clew which the police possess that may lead to the arrest of the autoist.

It is believed the glove belonged to the operator of the death car, who, after realizing that he had killed the woman, dropped it during his hurried departure from the scene.

PASS RESOLUTIONS ON MacSWINEY'S DEATH

Attleboro, Nov. 3.—Editor Boston American, Boston, Mass.:

Dear Sir—At the meeting of Fallon Court, No. 178, Massachusetts Catholic Order of Foresters, October 28, 1920, it was voted that a vote of condolence be given the family and relatives of Terence MacSwiney, Lord Mayor of Cork; Michael Fitzgerald and Joseph Murphy, who sacrificed their lives in a British prison for love of their country; and also a vote of condemnation be given the British government for the cruelty and barbarism shown in its action in the deaths of Mr. MacSwiney, Mr. Fitzgerald and Mr. Murphy; that the charter and gavels of the court be draped for thirty days and that a copy of these votes be sent to the public press and the Foresters' Herald. Hoping you may publish this in your valuable paper, I remain

Respectfully yours,
JOHN L. BRENNAN,
Recording Secretary.

THREE RAILROAD MEN KILLED IN COLLISION

Auburn, N. Y., Nov. 3.—Three railroad men were killed in a freight wreck in the Lehigh Valley yards here. The victims are Engineers James W. Toole and William M. Tuell and Trainman William E. Schultz. A double-header coal train ran into the rear of a train of box cars just pulling out of the yard.

WORCESTER VET ENDS LIFE WITH POISON

Worcester, Nov. 3.—Harold F. Schneider, aged twenty-nine, associated with the firm of Curnin & Schneider, committed suicide by swallowing poison in his home at No. 26 Hudson street. Ill-health caused by overseas service is thought to have been the cause of his act.

MICHIGAN PAROCHIAL SCHOOLS ARE UPHELD

Detroit, Nov. 3.—The constitutional amendment to abolish parochial schools in Michigan has been decisively defeated, according to returns today. The vote was almost 5 to 1 against the measure.

SOLDIERS HELD FOR ATTACK

Alleged Deserters From Camp Devens Accused of Robbing Auto at Gun Point

Greenfield, Nov. 3.—Chester A. Green and Cecil A. Jordan, both eighteen years old, were in District Court today charged with assault with attempt to rob Thomas Welcome on a lonely road in West Deerfield.

Both are alleged to be deserters from camp Devens. They were army uniforms and carried revolvers. They asked for a ride in Welcome's car and demanded the machine while pointing the revolvers at him, leaving the driver of the car to walk to his home.

They then drove to Ashfield, where they were arrested. They pleaded not guilty, claiming they were under the influence of liquor and were held under $2,000 bonds each.

Green said he is from Pennsylvania and enlisted in Illinois, N. Y., and had been at camp six months. Jordan came from Maine and enlisted at Albany, N. Y., and had been three months at Camp Devens.

CHILDREN START FIRE WITH MATCHES

Children playing with matches caused a fire in the third floor of the four-story brick dwelling at No. 1173A Tremont street Alacus were awakened at 6:30 this morning. The damage was $150. The apartment is occupied by Mrs. Katherine Walsh and owned by M. E. Carey.

ALFORD GOES G. O. P. FOR FIRST TIME IN HISTORY

Alford, Nov. 3.—This little town, nestled in the Berkshire hills went Republican for the first time. Harding carried Alford by 26 to 22 for Cox.

BRANDEGEE AND MOSES WIN

Unparalleled Republican Pluralities in Every New England State

Unparalleled Republican pluralities were piled up in every one of the six New England States in yesterday's election.

Returns showed constantly that Harding and Coolidge electors had been chosen in every state in this northeast corner of the nation. The first returns also indicated that Senators Moses and Brandegee of New Hampshire and Connecticut respectively, had been re-elected by large pluralities although running behind the full Republican strength shown by the head of the ticket.

Political observers have been gloating for several days that Senators Moses and Brandegee "had a fight on their hands." The returns indicate that they have won the fight. The first ten towns reported in New Hampshire gave Moses 1,174 votes and three gave Brandegee 226, a plurality for Moses of 648, or considerably more than two to one.

BRANDEGEE LEADING.

In Connecticut Senator Brandegee was swept along with the Republican tide. He carried Bridgeport by a vote of 13,309 to 12,018 for Longergan, the Democratic candidate. Harding and Coolidge's vote in Bridgeport was 27,465 to 11,037 for Cox and Roosevelt.

Five towns in Connecticut that gave Harding 3,166 votes, gave Brandegee 1,064. The same towns gave Cox 2,571 and Longergan 2,222.

Before 9 o'clock the Republican State committee in New Hampshire was claiming Moses' election by at least 30,000. Seventy towns gave Moses 18,849 to Shurtleff's 7,282. Also that A. O. Brown, the Republican candidate for Governor, had carried the state by at least 30,000. Brown is the Democratic candidate, by an overwhelming plurality.

HEAVY RHODE ISLAND VOTE.

The first 180 towns in New Hampshire to send in complete returns gave Harding 47,345 votes, Cox 26,229, Debs 1,072, and Moses 44,172. In 1916 they gave Hughes 23,989, Wilson 21,253.

Rhode Island's early returns not only show safe pluralities for the Republican candidates, but show an indicated increase of 300 per cent. in the total vote of the state over that cast in 1916. This is believed to be due, not only to the present voting, but in a large measure to the coming out of many stay-at-home Republicans.

Twenty-five cities and towns in Rhode Island out of a total of thirty-nine give Harding 14,534 and Cox 3,512. These towns gave Wilson 1,301 and Hughes 12,178 in 1916.

Portsmouth gave Harding 485 votes to 47 for Cox, West Greenwich gave Harding 126 and Cox 6, Richmond gave Harding 229 to 63 for Cox, Little Compton gave Harding 358 to 12 for Cox, Jamestown gave Harding 246 and 36 for Cox. These towns are indicative of the vote of all of the small towns and cities reported.

Maine voted consistently with the body of the nation in the September election. The first 230 towns and cities out of 471 in the State to report gave Harding 74,384 and Cox 29,343. In 1916 these towns and cities gave Hughes 62,512 and Wilson 28,606. The Republicans have apparently carried the State by 80,000 majority and indications are the committee wired to Chairman Hays of the National Committee that Maine had given Harding and Coolidge a plurality of 80,000.

Vermont piled up the expected Republican majorities and re-elected Senator W. P. Dillingham by a sweeping majority. The first 194 towns reporting gave Harding 27,903 and Cox 7,544.

The early indication that New England Republicans will gain seats in the national House of Representatives from Democrats now represented by Democrats, the landslide being general and irresistible throughout this region.

WADLEIGH WINNER IN FOURTH ESSEX DISTRICT

Haverhill, Nov. 3.—Albert P. Wadleigh of Merrimac, the Republican candidate for the State Senate in the Fourth Essex District, was elected over Senator Arthur L. Nason of Haverhill, Independent, and John H. O'Neil of Amesbury, Democrat.

LODGE DECLARES G. O. P. WILL RESCUE COUNTRY

In a speech preceded, followed and interrupted by frenzied applause, Senator Henry Cabot Lodge flayed the Wilson administration before a gathering of Republican leaders and State Committeemen at the American House, where they assembled for election returns.

"We are going to rescue the country," cried the senior Senator. "By the Republican organization we have rescued it from those who were menacing our constitution and our institutions and attempting to substitute for them a pretty cheap kind of autocracy."

Governor Calvin Coolidge, hailed with cheers, declared that the returns showed an "American victory for the people of the United States."

Chairman Frank B. Hall of the Republican State Committee, who introduced the speakers, announced that "Mr. Wilson wanted a solemn referendum of the people. He got it."

"It is 48 years since Massachusetts has had the honor of being the home State of a Vice President of the United States," he continued.

"I take great pleasure in introducing your friend, and my friend, the Hon. Vice President of the United States, Calvin Coolidge."

The answer to the announcement was a continuance of the tumultuous demonstration which had marked the entry of Senator Lodge and Governor Coolidge back of the rostrum from which the election returns were being called.

COOLIDGE LAUDS HARDING.

Governor Coolidge said:

"I thank you for your enthusiasm and your support. This is not a personal victory for anyone. It is an American victory and for the people of the United States. Sometimes we begin our jubilations too soon. Perhaps it will be well to take it while we may. But I think that the most cautious can assume that the Republican ticket is elected.

"The splendid work started here in Massachusetts has swept the country. Apparently the country has returned to the policy and the leadership of the Republican party. It is a tremendous responsibility which we have undertaken. But I think we have a man who can fill that in the person of Warren G. Harding.

"The time for making speeches ended at 6 o'clock in this State," I am saying when a voice declared "go ahead."

"I am retiring from the direction of your affairs here," Governor Coolidge continued. "I want to express my deep appreciation of the efforts of the organization, and particularly the organization of our women which has been faithful and active and which will strengthen and purify our party. This is an American victory."

PANDEMONIUM OVER LODGE.

Before the cheering was ended Chairman Hall began his introduction of Senator Lodge.

"Someone said that the Wilson League of Nations must be Americanized or paralyzed," he stated.

"When the League came before the scrutiny of our Senate, it found a wall of Sparta against it in the person of our distinguished scholar of the day, Henry Cabot Lodge."

For over a minute pandemonium raged while Senator Lodge stepped forward.

"Fellow Americans, ladies and gentlemen," was his greeting.

PRAISES CAMPAIGN WORK.

"Once upon a time, far beyond the memory of many I am sure, I was chairman of the State committee. We had to elect Governor Robinson and defeat Butler. I was called to Faneuil Hall to speak following the election. I said on that occasion: 'My speech is in the returns.' I am inclined to make that same speech tonight.

"The die has been cast in Massachusetts. Massachusetts has gone on record against the present administration, its heirs and assigns. Our administration of State affairs is now assured. I have no doubt of the election of Senator Harding and Governor Cox of Massachusetts. But confidence is a slow growth in an aged bosom. I like to have assurance in figures. But such an intelligent campaign has been made by our organization and especially by our women in Massachusetts, that I feel victory is assured.

WILL "RESCUE" COUNTRY.

"I told Chairman Hall long ago that women have a better intuition than men. And this victory shows that. We are going to rescue the country. By the Republican organization we have rescued it from those who are menacing our Constitution and our institutions and substitute for these a pretty cheap kind of autocracy.

"The man who is most interested in all our affairs, is the man who will consult his constitutional advisors, the Senators. We have elected such a man—one who will not hesitate to draw the best men about him.

"Like President Lincoln, he will draw about him the very best men of the country as his advisors. And I know we have made no mistake in selecting the one who will keep the Senate in check, as President of the Senate, in the man we have selected as our Vice-President."

"PLAIN PEOPLE" WON.

Channing Cox, Governor-elect, introduced as the "Little Giant of Ward 7," declared that the election was the voice of the plain people who hold inviolate the Constitution.

Mrs. Charles Sumner Bird and Mrs. Anna T. Tillinghast spoke for the women's organization.

JOHN M. WOODS, 81, ELECTED TO HOUSE

A Civil War veteran in his eighty-second year, ex-Mayor John M. Woods of Somerville, who was elected to the Legislature from the 24th Middlesex District, will be the oldest member of that body in the point of service, having served in the Lower House in 1914, and, as such, will call the House to order when it convenes next January.

JUDGE SUSPENDS THEFT SENTENCE OF VETERAN

Judge Bacon in the Waltham District Court today suspended the sentence he had imposed upon Patrick Ventella of East Boston, a chauffeur, convicted of stealing $15 worth of wood from his employers, the Bailey Lumber Company, when the court learned that Ventella had served overseas.

UNITARIAN CAMPAIGN TO OPEN IN CONCORD

The "Unitarian Campaign, Incorporated," will be formally launched in Concord this evening with a supper in the vestry of the First Parish Meeting House, at 7 o'clock. Oliver Fisher will speak. The committee chairman in Concord is B. Farnum Smith.

SOUTH END MAN IS VICTIM OF ALCOHOL

Physicians at the City Hospital have ascribed the serious illness of Dennis Conley, who was removed there from Dedham street, as alcoholic poisoning. Conley is 49 years old and lives on Union Park street.

People Decide Right Again, Says Hays

New York, Nov. 2.—Will H. Hays, Republican national chairman, issued the following statement shortly after 10 o'clock last night.

"Precisely as has been the case in every instance since the founding of the Republic the American people, when confronted with a grave decision: have decided right. The returns seem to indicate an unparalleled majority. It is an extraordinary degree of agreement on the part of the people as to whom they want to conduct their common affairs and the course they want them to take."

YOUNG SPEAKER OF LEGISLATURE

Frank G. Allen of Norwood to Be President of State Senate

The president of the State Senate for 1921 and 1922 will be:

Senator Frank G. Allen of Norwood, who was re-elected yesterday without opposition.

The speaker of the House for the next two years will be:

Representative Benjamin Loring Young of Weston, re-elected yesterday by a handsome majority.

Allen will succeed as president, Edwin T. McKnight of Medford and Boston, who retires from active politics at the end of the year. Mr. McKnight has been identified with several banks, of which the Fidelity Trust Company was the most prominent.

Young, former Harvard athlete, former chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, present Republican "whip" of the House and regarded by G. O. P. strategists as "a likely young man," will succeed Speaker Joseph E. Warner, who made the run for Lieutenant-Governor and failed.

Memorial Service Sunday

A memorial service will be held in honor of the late Mrs. Lina Frank Hoehr, who was prominent in Jewish charity work and who founded the Hebrew Industrial School, at the Temple Israel next Sunday afternoon.

G. O. P. SWEEP IN CONNECTICUT

Senator Brandegee an Easy Victor; Harding's Plurality 60,000

New Haven, Nov. 2.—The bitter contest in Connecticut for the seat of Senator Frank B. Brandegee turned out to be an easy G. O. P. victory.

The State went for Harding by from 50,000 to 60,000 piurality, and carried the State ticket, headed by Everett J. Lake for Governor to victory. Senator Brandegee ran about 19 per cent. behind Lake.

Complete returns from Meriden, the first city to report, told the story. Here Harding ran almost two to one against Cox and Brandegee had 7,000 votes against 4,206 for Augustine Lonergan, who was opposing him for the senatorship. Hughes carried Connecticut four years ago, so the result in the State as a whole was never in doubt.

Four Republican congressmen are surely elected. In the first district, however, the fate of W. H. Fenn is still somewhat in doubt.

New York, Nov. 3.—Republican national headquarters announced that Harding carried Connecticut Tuesday, with Brandegee only slightly behind.

Unofficial returns in New Haven indicate the city has gone Republican by 11,000.

JUMPS FROM WINDOW AS SHOTS ARE FIRED

Providence, Nov. 3. — Revolver shots, fired in a family quarrel, frightened Mrs. Josephine Kelvey, 48 years old, into jumping from a second-story window at the rear of No. 116 Burnett street, where she has been housekeeper for Hugh Duffy. She was taken to the Rhode Island Hospital with a broken leg. The police arrested Duffy who, they said, discharged a revolver twice in a quarrel with his children.

FORE RIVER "VACATION" MAY SHUT OUT 6,000

Six thousand workers employed at the Fore River shipyard, Quincy, face a period of "idleness" unless the controversy between the 600 riveters who are now on "vacation" and the company officials is settled within the next week or ten days. The trouble may result in a complete shutdown of the plant, according to a statement made by one of the company officials.

WOMEN EXPECT CABINET PLACE

Will Remind Harding He Said One of Sex Was Needed in Advisory Post

By International News Service.

Washington, Nov. 2.—Triumphant over their showing at the polls, the women are now preparing to make their voice heard in the new administration.

Alice Paul, chairman of the National Woman's party, and other leaders sounded a warning today that from now on the woman vote will act as an organized force and the voice of women will make loud and insistent noise in public affairs.

Programs announced by the various organizations indicate that the new Congress will be descended upon by the largest army of feminine lobbyists ever mobilized for action.

President-Elect Harding is to be reminded of his campaign statement that a Federal Department of Welfare is needed with a woman at its head as somember of the Cabinet.

Who the first woman member of the Cabinet will be is already the subject of speculation in feminine political circles. Mrs. Corinne Roosevelt Robinson, sister of the late Colonel Roosevelt, and Mrs. Raymond Robins, head of the Woman's Trade Union League, both of whom campaigned for Harding, are most prominently mentioned as possibilities.

The next big thing on the program will be the national convention of women voters, which will assemble here in February.

BOSTON MAN CRUSHED IN LAWRENCE CRASH

Lawrence, Nov. 3.—Pinned between a truck and touring car, David Castleman of No. 25 Charles street, Boston, sustained a fractured rib and cuts here. He is being treated at the General Hospital. The vehicles collided at the corner of Park and Willow streets. Castleman was riding on the truck and was thrown out and crushed between the machines.

WILLIAM A. SAMUEL BURIED AT LEXINGTON

Funeral services for William Alexander Samuel of Ward street, Lexington, a student at the Boston University Law School, who died Sunday from over-exertion in a race on Labor Day, took place this afternoon in the Hosmer Street First Baptist Church, of which the young man was an attendant. The body was interred in the family plot in the Lexington Cemetery.

RICH FABRICS RETURN!

but how will you drape them?

WILL you wear velvet? Or rich brocade? Or perhaps you will choose more supple silks and satins—supple, though laden with luxuriant gold and silver trimming!

And how will you drape them, Madame,—your newest frocks and gowns of these exquisite fabrics? For draped they must be, Paris ordains. Will you choose Cheruit's youthful slimness? The graceful width of Lanvin? Or will you insist, with Poiret, in returning to 1830 for your inspiration—and wear a skirt of bouffant tendency?

BUT here Poiret, forgetting the models of 1830, has draped an exquisite gown of softest brown satin, from collar to hem along slender clinging lines. And Spinelly crowns its triumph by wearing it, —wearing it with a Gallic magnetism and charm which only a Spinelly is capable of.

But what of hats? and wraps? and furs? Will the short, square cape-effect in the newest of furs—slynx, of course—become you? And have you seen the very latest in evening gowns,—the double train? Of course, you will simply have to read

SAGE TEA KEEPS YOUR HAIR DARK

When Mixed With Sulphur It Brings Back Its Beautiful Lustre At Once

Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray, and looks streaked, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the recipe at home or get from any drug store a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which is merely the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients. Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully; besides, no one can possibly tell as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two its natural color is restored, and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger.—Advertisement.

Nasty Colds

Get instant relief with "Pape's Cold Compound"

Don't stay stuffed up! Quit blowing and snuffling! A dose of "Pape's Cold Compound" taken every two hours until three doses are taken usually breaks up a cold and ends all grippe misery.

The very first dose opens your clogged-up nostrils and the air passages of your head; stops nose running; relieves the headache, dullness, feverishness, sneezing, soreness, stiffness.

"Pape's Cold Compound" is the quickest, surest relief known and costs only a few cents at drug stores. It acts without assistance. Tastes nice. Contains no quinine. Insist on Pape's!

Resinol tired aching feet

...grateful relief from that swollen, dry and stiff sensation, bathe your feet with Resinol Soap and hot water. Then apply Resinol Ointment, rubbing it in thoroughly and allowing it to remain on for ten or fifteen minutes or over night, if possible.

This mild treatment rarely fails to soothe and invigorate tired, sore feet. All druggists sell Resinol Soap and Ointment.

Clogged-Up Liver Causes Headache

The liver is one of the regulators of health. If the liver is active and well, good health and happiness are encouraged, but once you allow your liver to get torpid and sluggish, life becomes a misery. Indigestion, Biliousness, Constipation, Headaches and Melancholy will appear, resulting in lack of energy, loss of zest, misery and ill health; but 1 pounded Carter's Little Liver Pills touch the liver and correct all liver ills.

'MARTY' GIVEN SILVER TROPHY

Bashful Skipper of Esperanto, Speechless From Cold, Cheered at Banquet

By BERT FORD

Halifax, Nov. 2.—They gave Captain "Marty" Welch a silver cup for himself in token of his triumph of the northern seas and he blushed like a bashful schoolgirl, which was going some for a chap with the ruddy complexion of the skipper of the Esperanto.

Shy in the extreme in every-day affairs, to be called upon to make a speech in the presence of such notables as Lieutenant-Governor Grant of Nova Scotia and Premier Murray, head of the Provincial Government, and others, would have chilled "Marty" speechless, even if he didn't have that cold, but the attack of laryngitis was the finest kind of an alibi and "Marty" worked it.

"MARTY'S" SILENCE ELOQUENT.

"Lifting one calloused hand to his throat and moving his lips from which came not a syllable, "Marty" reached out his other calloused hand for the cup and sat down amid cheers." Nobody who knew "Marty" expected any more of an oration. His shy bows and smile were enough.

His silence was more eloquent than anything he could have said," remarked a man on the opposite side of the table. And then they called on Captain "Tom" Himmelman, skipper of Delawana, whose colors "Marty" lowered. "Tom" was more eloquent than the skipper of Esperanto by about three broken sentences, the theme of which was that he would like "to get just one more chance at the Yankee boat."

The occasion was the informal presentation to General Manager Thomas J. Carroll, of the Gorton-Pew Fisheries Company of Gloucester, owners of Esperanto, the big silver trophy donated as a perpetual trophy for annual international fishermen's races.

PRIZE MONEY PRESENTED.

The Colonial Fisheries Company, Ltd., of Boston, sent a representative here with a smaller cup for Captain Welch.

In the evening a second banquet was held at the Commercial Club where the sailing committee awarded $4,400 to Captain Welch and his victorious crew and $1,900 to Captain Himmelman and his men.

The speeches rang with promises of a bigger international race of fishing schooners next year off Halifax and of the influence of such events in cementing ties between Canada and the United States. The American newspapers and correspondents and photographers were thanked with fervor for the part they played in the success of the race just ended and Captain Welch and his crew and the hardy fishermen of both countries were eulogized.

Chairman H. R. Silver, of the Halifax committee, said there was a sentiment back of the fishermen's trophy which meant far more than did the cup raced for by specially designed yachts representing England and America.

CEMENT FRIENDSHIP TIES.

Lieutenant-Governor Grant said: "Better to have raced and lost than not to have raced at all. This nautical event which it is planned to-hold annually will tie firm knots in the golden cord of friendship that binds Canada and your wonderful country, the United States."

Premier Murray said he thought it was one of the greatest sporting events ever held in Canada.

Other speakers were: William H. Dennis, publisher of the Herald and Mail, who conceived the idea of the fishermen's races; General Manager Carroll of the Gorton-Pew Company; Consul Gunsaulus, Mayor Brown of Gloucester and Mayor Parker of Halifax and James B. Connolly.

AUTOIST ROBBED BY PROSPECTIVE PURCHASER

Providence, Nov. 3.—The police here are searching for the affable stranger who rode with Edgar M. Dexter of No. 116 Albert avenue, Cranston, while he demonstrated an automobile for sale, and then beat and robbed Dexter in the woodsy section near Belifont. Dexter was stunned by a blow on the head by a piece of iron, after which the prospective purchaser of the automobile took his pocketbook and ran into the woods.

The Log of the Esperanto

By EDWARD T. MILLETT

Halifax, N. S., Nov. 2.—From our lee bow we can hear the roaring of breakers as we rapidly near our final run up Halifax harbor.

The fog is still hanging heavy, and it is low.

"Ahoy, there, the Esperanto," and following the hail, the shape of a three-sticker appears off on our starboard side, bearing down upon us.

"Here's the pilot now," said one of the skipper; "we must be somewhere near Chebucto."

As she hauled alongside, the first word that greeted us was "America," the name of the boat.

It was a peculiar coincidence that, after sailing nearly 400 miles, our first introduction to Canadians should come through "America."

"Good luck to you," sang out the Canadian pilot, as his boat passed us astern, and sailed slowly into the mist.

"We ought to hear the signal gun soon, fellers," said Marty, and sure enough, in less than five minutes the signal gun on the Chebucto Head, a fog signal to warn our mariners to keep off, boomed dismally through the damp atmosphere.

Watches came out, and we found that it was nearly six o'clock.

"One point off our port bow two small lights were beginning to blink at us through the fog, and out of the mist appeared the form of a steamer heading for us.

"Ahoy, the Esperanto, we're going to tow you in," came a voice from the pilot house of the tug, and soon she was alongside of us with hawser on the hight, her nose pointing toward Halifax harbor.

We landed at the Campbell Wharf at about 6:30, legs wobbling, faces tanned by the Atlantic wind and fog, happy that the end of our run was over and that we would sleep on land once more.

The aroma of cooking came from the forecastle, and the cook, Gobey, the cook, slid, rather than ran, to the gangway. Holy smokes. I nearly lost the gang's supper that time. I was so interested in seeing what was going on.

At this point in my log, I want to lay particular stress upon the service that was rendered us by Cook Gobey, who, in my estimation, measures far above the average standard of a cook on a fishing schooner.

All during the passage across, never forgetting, for a moment, the men on deck, he labored hard and earnestly giving us his best service and with the aid of a. F. Brown, the "Letchee," served us ayy with food surpassed by no hotel or cafe in the entire city of Gloucester.

We had roast beef, roast lamb, beefsteak, beans, roast chicken, cool slaw, pies, cakes, biscuits and best of all "boileless doughnuts" that Mickey Hall called "Venice life preservers." At any time of day or night, if one wanted anything, he had but to say the word and Ike would get it.

Upon arrival at the wharf, His Worship Mayor John Parker, "Bill" Dennis, the most popular man in Halifax today, and other officials connected with the race, met us.

They gave us a warm welcome, which was adhered to until our departure from port. On shore, everything was being done for the arriving "Yankees" that could be done. Halifax and its people will be in my mind cannot be accused of not being hospitable, greeted us with open arms.

The city was ours, and no matter where we turned or strolled we received kindly greetings and offers of assistance from all quarters. Even "Mickey" Hall was by this time "warming up" to Halifax, or a by-product of Halifax.

The last I saw of Mickey, as I headed for my room to send my first instalment of this log, he was trying to tell a crowd of Canadians how America won the war. I rather think that Mickey would have started another war right there if some one hadn't got a tow line around him amidships and sailed him to the windward of the Canadian squall that came up as he tried to explain why the dye in the Canadian flag faded so soon.

We are looking for bets on the Esperanto and I estimate that there is close on to $100,000 of American money itching the palms of the Gloucester men present, but we can find no takers. The Lunenbergers will not bet on their own boat, so if they won't who will?

ONLY 3 BAY STATE TOWNS CARRIED BY DEMOCRATS

The Democrats carried only three towns in Massachusetts—Lenox, the millionaire colony in the Berkshires; Blackstone, near the Rhode Island line, and Milford, the biggest Democratic town in the State. But in all these towns the usual Democratic pluralities were greatly reduced. President Wilson carried them by 875 four years ago. Cox's lead in them yesterday was 198. He carried Lenox by 41, Blackstone by 93 and Milford, which President Wilson carried by 629, gave Cox a lead of only 33.

$100 FOUND ON WOMAN AFTER SHE ACCUSES BANK

A woman about sixty years of age, claiming to be Mary Kaumbia of No. 99 Worcester street, was arrested in the East Cambridge Savings Bank by the police of that city after she claimed that she had been "short changed" of $100 when making a large withdrawal. When searched the $100 was found on the person. Bank books found in her possession showing entries of more than $5,000, were in the name of Mary Rudolph.

ARSON SUSPECT ESCAPES JAIL

Youth Held as Suspect in Hotel Fires Flees Charles Street Institution

John Hobko, alias James Harrison, eighteen-year-old Paterson, N. J., boy who confessed to having set fires in five Boston hotels when he was arrested five months ago, escaped from the Charles Street Jail early today.

He had been a trusty since his return from the Psychopathic Hospital about two months ago and had free access to the yard. He had probably been gone several hours before his absence was discovered.

Hobko was being held for trial in connection with incendiary fires last June in the American House, Hotel Lenox, Brewster, Adams House and the Hollis Hotel.

The day after his arrest, on June 30, he confessed to setting the fires, but declared that he suffered severe headaches and insomnia and did not know what he was doing when he set them.

His signature in the registers of the hotels was regarded as strong conflicting evidence. He also admitted he was a deserter from the navy.

Later he was submitted to the Psychopathic Hospital for a sanity test and when he was returned to the jail about two months ago he tried to commit suicide by hanging. He recovered and was later made a trusty, doing errands about the jail. He failed to report from his last assignment, but his disappearance was not noticed for several hours.

The police are watching lunchrooms and hotels closely in the hope that he will endeavor to secure a position in one of them. He served as a dishwasher at several cafes in Boston during his short career here.

STRIKE TIES UP VERA CRUZ

Ships Held in Port Unable to Unload While Mounted Police Patrol Streets

Vera Cruz, Nov. 2.—The port of Vera Cruz is still in the grip of a seamen's strike. Fifteen foreign ocean going steamers which arrived in the harbor a week ago are tied up and cannot load or unload their cargoes. Demurrage charges are running up tremendously and ship owners are likely to experience severe losses.

The strikers, who are all well armed, will not permit the cargoes to be touched. They are well supplied with money to tide them over a long period.

Mounted policemen, in groups of ten, are patrolling the streets. All business houses in Vera Cruz have been closed. Another meeting was held by the chamber of commerce to see if some settlement of the strike can be made.

BOY KILLS BABY SISTER WHILE PLAYING WITH GUN

Nashua, N. H., Nov. 2.—Marion La Chance, the twenty-two-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph La Chance of No. 3 Second street, was shot and killed when a shotgun in the hands of her seven-year-old brother, Henry, was accidentally discharged. The boy was playing with the gun, which had been left within his reach by the father after returning from a hunting trip, when the fatality occurred.

BURSTING PIPE KILLS 10 ON STEAMER FRANCE

New York, Nov. 2.—The ill-starred voyage of the steamer France, during which ten of her crew were killed by the bursting of an eight-inch steam pipe, ended at this port today. The dead were landed at Cherbourg. The body of Mrs. Ogden Mills, who died in Paris October 12, was aboard.

KEEP LOOKING YOUNG

It's Easy—If You Know Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

The secret of keeping young is to feel young—to do this you must watch your liver and bowels—there's no need of having a sallow complexion—dark rings under your eyes—pimples—a bilious look in your face—dull eyes with no sparkle. Your doctor will tell you ninety per cent of all sickness comes from inactive bowels and liver.

Dr. Edwards, a well-known physician in Ohio, perfected a vegetable compound mixed with olive oil to act on the liver and bowels, which he gave to his patients for years.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel, are gentle in their action yet always effective. They bring about that natural buoyancy which all should enjoy by toning up the liver and clearing the system of impurities.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are known by their olive color. 15c and 30c.

"They WORK while you sleep"

Cascarets

You are constipated, bilious, and what you need is one or two Cascarets tonight sure for your liver and bowels. Then you will wake up wondering what became of your dizziness, sick headache, bad cold, or upset, gassy stomach. No griping—no inconvenience. Children love Cascarets too. 10, 25, 50 cents.

A Stubborn Cough Loosens Right Up

This home-made remedy is a wonder for quick results. Easily and cheaply made.

Here is a home-made syrup which millions of people have found to be the most dependable means of breaking up stubborn coughs. It is cheap and simple, but very prompt in action. Under its healing, soothing influence, chest soreness goes, phlegm loosens, breathing becomes easier, tickling in throat stops and you get a good night's restful sleep. The usual throat and chest colds are conquered by it in 24 hours or less. Nothing better for bronchitis, hoarseness, croup, throat tickle, bronchial asthma or winter coughs.

To make this splendid cough syrup, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex into a pint bottle, and fill the bottle with plain granulated sugar syrup and shake thoroughly. If you prefer use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, you get a full pint—a family supply—of much better cough syrup than you could buy ready-made for three times the money. Keeps perfectly and children love its pleasant taste.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, known the world over for its prompt healing effect upon the membranes.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with full directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money promptly refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

WOMEN SMILE IN DEFEAT

Four Candidates for State Offices See Chance for Sex in Future

Four women, unsuccessful candidates for various offices in City and State, are not shedding any tears.

Mrs. Alice F. Cram, Democratic candidate for State Auditor; Miss Edith M. Williams, Socialist candidate for Secretary of State; Mrs. Mary A. Harris, Republican candidate for State Representative, and Mrs. Sarah Goddard, also Republican candidate for State Representative, smile at their defeat, and talk cheerfully, good sports all.

They still have hope for the future, and they are sure the country isn't going to the dogs, just because they didn't happen to get elected.

Mrs. Cram says:

"I'm just as happy that I didn't get elected. I didn't run as a woman candidate. I ran as a person who was able to do the job. I ran, not to please any individual ambition I had to be State Auditor, but to see if I couldn't give women a chance to take one of the offices on this first election we have voted.

THE PEOPLE'S WILL.

"I was defeated. All right. It is the people's will. As for the great issues of the election, and the League of Nations, particularly; while I would have preferred to see Cox win, most naturally, I am sure that the League of Nations, just the same, is going to have a chance. Our country is most decidedly going into it. Indeed, we can't keep out of it, with 42 nations already belonging, and the League already functioning.

"In conclusion, let me say that I think the elections were most fairly conducted, and that I am sure, by the time the next presidential elections come some candidates from their own sex 'round, the women will be able to elect some candidates of their own sex."

Miss Edith Willian, Socialist candidate for Secretary of State, had her opinions.

"To the result of the presidential elections," she said, "I am perfectly indifferent. I think both candidates were equally bad. It doesn't make an iota of difference which one was elected. I have heard of many most intelligent voters who voted for Debs, in prison, as a protest. This is the logical vote to cast, in my opinion, things being as they are. It is a protest, merely, to the wretched state we have got into politically. As for the League of Nations, it is hard to say what will become of it.

OFFICIALS FAIR.

"We know the successful candidate has promised us we should have some sort of league, but I don't know how much trust we can put in his word. The election officials were most fair in their methods here in Brookline and I am grateful to them. The Socialists have always given women an equal chance politically, and for that reason I ran on a Socialist ticket. I didn't expect to be elected, but I ran to do what I could to draw attention to women and the Socialist principles."

Mrs. Sarah Goddard, defeated Republican candidate for the State Legislature from Ward 6, was most pleased with the results of Tuesday's voting.

"I couldn't be better satisfied if I had been elected," said Mrs. Goddard. "We have elected two good men, Harding and Coolidge, and I have faith in good times to come. I am not disappointed that the women candidates for the various offices were defeated. We did not expect victory this year. We have simply made a start.

OPENING WEDGE.

"Our candidacy was merely the opening wedge. In other years it will be easier for women, because a few women, at the start, ran for office, and were not discouraged, though they lost. But, as a matter of fact, I think all women need be very thankful, this morning, at the way things have gone."

Mrs. Mary A. Harris, candidate for the State Legislature in Ward 6, said:

"The election was perfectly splendid and I am just pleased that there is to be a good Republican administration for these next four years. I am especially pleased, because I think the new woman voter had a good share in bringing about the happy result. Women turned out so well. I sat and watched them from my window and it was a sight inspiring for the future. I am sure, furthermore, that the Republicans are going to give us a League of Nations which shall put our United States where she should be—a leader of all nations.

"They'll fix up a league which will give us as many votes as England. I am sure. Thankful we should be in all our hearts this day, whether we were defeated, in a small way, as I have been, or whether we were one of the new plain voters, who helped win this good victory."

HYDE PARK WOMAN'S LEG BROKEN BY AUTO

Mrs. Muriel Weld of No. 387 Hyde Park avenue received a fractured left leg when run down by an automobile in Park square and is under treatment at the City Hospital. John L. All Records Broken, Declares Weeks

New York, Nov. 3.—Former Senator John W. Weeks, of Massachusetts, in charge of Republican national headquarters, issued the following statement at 8:40 last night:

"All returns indicate that Senator Harding has been elected by the greatest majority of any President in the history of the United States. There is not a bad spot on the landscape.

"The indications are that Senator Harding carried New York State by three-quarters of a million votes and that he carried New York city by more than 350,000 majority."

SAN SOUCI BY 47,000 IN R.I.

Republican Ticket Goes in With Landslide—Both Women Candidates Lose

Providence, Nov. 3.—The Republican state ticket made a clean sweep throughout Rhode Island in the landslide. Lieutenant-Governor Aimer J. San Souci of this city, was elected Governor, defeating Edward J. Sullivan of Cranston by more than 47,000.

Harold J. Gross of this city defeated Elizabeth Upham Yates, Democratic candidate for Lieutenant-Governor, by a similar plurality, and J. Frederick Parker was re-elected Secretary of State over Miss Helen L. Binning. Richard H. Jennings was re-elected General Treasurer over M. C. Cartier, and Herbert A. Rice was re-elected Attorney-General over Herbert Carpenter. All won by about the same plurality as the head of the ticket.

This was the largest ever turned out in the history of the state and it was not until noon today that all of the votes were finally tabulated. At that hour it could be estimated this forenoon Harding had carried the State by nearly 5,000, an unprecedent plurality.

Congressman Clark Burdick was re-elected in the First Congressional District, defeating former Mayor Boyle of Newport. Congressman Walter R. Stiness was re-elected, beating Luigi Depasquale in the Second Congressional District. Ambrose Kennedy was returned, defeating Herve Legace.

The upset of the city elections came in the defeat of State Senator Daniel E. Geary of Providence by Herbert Sherwood, Republican. The latter's plurality was more than 3,000. Mayor Joseph H. Gainer was re-elected for the fifth consecutive term, defeating Gardner, Republican. His plurality was more than 4,000.

Mayors of four other Rhode Island cities were re-elected. Mayor Robert A. Kenyon, Republican, Pawtucket, by 3,650; Mayor Charles H. Dowd, Democrat, Central Falls, 1,937; Mayor Adelard Boucey, Democrat, Woonsocket, 2,248, and Mayor John W. Horton, Republican, Cranston, 3,000.

Matthew J. Cummings, overseer of the poor; Walter L. Clarke, treasurer, and John J. Maguire, harbor master, were all re-elected in Providence. They had no opposition.

MRS. ALEXANDER BRADLEY'S FIVE YEAR OLD DAUGHTER DANGEROUSLY ILL

Here is a little bit of true life put into a letter By a mother of three children. It seems that since birth these children have been sickly. "But," says Mrs. Alexander Bradley of Danbury, Connecticut, "after 14 long years trying different remedies I have at last found a good medicine—Dr. True's Elixir. My daughter, five years old, has had so much trouble with worms and constipation.

"I was nearly discouraged. I was giving the oldest girl something nearly every night, but now I keep a bottle of Dr. True's Elixir handy, and only give it occasionally. I give two teaspoons at night and two teaspoons in the morning with good results. I have tried so many things that now as soon as I see signs of worms I give Dr. True's Elixir for quick relief.

"My son, 14 years of age, was always troubled with worms when small and 'Dr. True's' was unknown to me then. I always have it on hand now, as I have another small child. They even ask for more. Now please print this letter so other anxious mothers may know the good results Which follow Dr. True's Elixir for children suffering with worms and constipation, as I cannot recommend it too highly."

In these quick, active days we sometimes neglect our health. Often we eat too fast and do not allow proper time for digestion. Consequently we suffer from restless sleep and are distressed all day with troublesome headaches, nausea and general out-of-sorts feeling.

Symptoms of worms—Offensive breath, swollen upper lip, deranged stomach, occasional pains about the navel, pale face of leaden tint, eyes heavy and dull, twitching eyelids, itching of the nose, itching of the rectum, short dry cough, grinding of the teeth, red points on the tongue, starting during sleep, slow fever.

A great deal of sickness comes from irregular bowels, a vital part of active days, at the first signs of cold or fever, give Dr. True's Elixir—for it is the right kind—pleasant to take, with no griping or distressing after-effects.

MRS. BRADLEY AND CHILDREN

Nearly every grown-up and every child needs a laxative. In Dr. True's Elixir only pure herbs are used. No harmful drugs. Keep the bowels regular by using Dr. True's Elixir.

Recipe to Make a Gray Hair Remedy

A. L. Paulson, M. D., who has practiced medicine in New York City for many years, gave out the following recipe for a home-made gray hair remedy: "Gray, streaked or faded hair can be quickly turned black, brown or light brown, whichever shade you desire, by the following remedy that you can make at home:

"Merely get a box of Orlex powder at any drug store. It costs very little and no extras to buy. Dissolve it in 2 oz. of distilled or rain water and comb it through the hair. Full directions for use and a gold bond guarantee come in each box.

"It is safe, does not rub off, is not sticky or greasy, and leaves the hair fluffy. It will make a gray-haired person look twenty years younger."—Advertisement.

SIMPLE WAY TO GET RID OF BLACKHEADS

There is one simple, safe and sure way that you never fails to get rid of blackheads and that is to dissolve them.

To do this get two ounces of calcite powder from any drug store—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet sponge—rub over the blackheads briskly—wash the parts and you will be surprised how the blackheads have disappeared. Big blackheads, little blackheads, no matter where they are, simply dissolve and disappear, leaving the parts without any mark whatever. Blackheads are simply mixtures of dust and dirt and secretions from the body that form in the pores of the skin. Pinching and squeezing only cause irritation, make large pores and do not get them out after they become red. The calcite powder and the steaming simply dissolve the blackheads and they wash right out, leaving the pores free and clean and in their natural condition. Anyone troubled with these unsightly blemishes should certainly try this simple method.—Advertisement.

WHITE TO WED MRS. SLOANE

Ex-Ambassador to France to Marry Sister of Cornelius Vanderbilt

Henry White, former ambassador, is to wed Mrs. William Douglas Sloane of Lenox and New York, according to reports reaching this city today from the home of the prospective bride-to-be.

Mr. White, besides serving this country as ambassador to France and Italy, was a member of the Peace Conference delegation in the suite of President Wilson.

Mrs. Sloane is the widow of William D. Sloane, former merchant prince of New York city. She was Miss Emily Thorn Vanderbilt, second daughter of William H. Vanderbilt and a sister of Cornelius Vanderbilt. Mr. Sloane died five years ago, leaving an estate valued at many millions.

BOSTON IS AUTHORITY.

No formal announcement of the coming marriage has been made either in Lenox or in New York, although the Rev. Lauriston Livingston, rector of Trinity Episcopal Church of Lenox, and a personal friend as well as the pastor of both Mr. White and Mrs. Sloane, is authority for the statement that his two prominent parishioners are soon to be married.

Reports of the engagement of the former diplomat and Mrs. Sloane have been rife in Lenox and New York for some time, and have been persistently denied. To reporters who called upon him for verification or denial of the report Mr. White sent word that he was too busy to be interviewed.

Mr. White is more than seventy year old, and has lived abroad for more than thirty years. He was the leading American representative at the Algeciras conference in 1911, which was called to settle the Moroccan question.

WAS CRITICIZED.

White's appointment by President Wilson as a delegate to the Peace Conference provoked adverse criticism because of the former ambassador's reputed friendly feelings for the ex-Kaiser. His daughter was the wife of Count Ernst Herman Scherr-Thoss.

Mr. White comes of a prominent Baltimore family. His first wife was Miss Margaret Stuyvesant Rutherford of New York, whom he married in 1879. He has a home in Newport and one in Washington.

South End Children Saved by Firemen

These little ones are the envy of their neighborhood playmates after being carried from their burning tenement. From left to right they are: Lopie Stephen, six years old; Stelic, eight, and baby Dora, a year and a half.

Mrs. Jennie Stephen and her three children were carried from their tenement on the second floor of No. 27 Paul street, South End, when fire started in the basement of the building and filled the stairway with smoke.

The rescue was effected by the crew of Ladder 13. A ladder was placed to a window of the tenement and the mother and the children assisted to safety.

The blaze, which started in a can of rubbish, was discovered by Patrolman W. B. Dooley of Station 4, who sent in the alarm. A stairway from the basement to the first floor was burned. The damage of the three upper floors was due chiefly to smoke.

Isaac Cohen of No. 7 Harris street, Roxbury, is the owner of the building, a brick structure. The loss was about $200.

DEFEAT FAILS TO DISMAY WALSH

Pleased at Vote He Received and Will Serve People as Political Educator

John Jackson Walsh, the Democratic nominee for Governor, was philosophical while receiving the returns which indicated his defeat. The reports from all parts of Massachusetts were taken to him at his office in Barristers Hall. After analysis of the returns, Walsh gave the following statement to newspaper men:

"At this moment the election of the Republican candidate seems certain. Rejoicing on the part of the victors is for the hour.

"The burden of victory in the unsettled state of the world's affairs will long outlast the delirious joy of the triumph.

"The Republican party cannot retain power unless its course tends more and more to parallel the Democratic platform. No one should begrudge the victors all good will in making their successors an opportunity for signal achievements, singular in accompanying the troubles of a fretted civilization.

"I have reason to be pleased at the vote I received under most adverse conditions and am confirmed in my belief that there is a post of service for me in giving a portion of the time which I can spare from my professional labors to the education of the people in political questions.

"To this end I intend to begin at once to organize the people of the Commonwealth who believe in democracy into self-supporting units which will not have to depend upon the benefactors or contributions or favors of rich men who seek only the honors of party, giving it in return no intellectual impetus."

Wilson's District in Harding Landslide

Princeton, N. J., Nov. 2.—President and Mrs. Wilson, Professor William Daniels, chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and his wife, and others notables cast their ballots in the seventh district of the borough of Princeton. Professor Henry J. Ford, another member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and Mrs. Ford voted by mail, as did also the President and Mrs. Wilson. The mailed ballots were brought with great care to Princeton by Holmes Larue, secretary of the county board of elections, from his office in Trenton where they were received. The district is estimated to have gone for Harding and Coolidge by a 5-to-1 ratio. President Wilson, ever since he left Princeton, has maintained his legal residence at No. 10 Nassau street, and only his present illness prevented him from voting in person.

RULES TO SAVE TRUCK TIRES

Overloading, Overspeeding, Low Inflation Pressure Mean Early Death to Auto Shoes

Here are some rules for truck drivers on the care of solid and pneumatic truck tires, formulated by the technical department of the United States Tire Company for the benefit of truck owners:

All truck tires have a load limit. Constant slight or occasional heavy overloads shorten tire life.

Distribute the load in the truck body so each tire will bear its proportionate share of the weight carried.

Overspeeding a tire has the same harmful effect as overloading. Keep truck speed within prescribed limits.

Know—don't guess—your inflation pressures. Proper inflation pressure is as important as proper loads and speeds.

Tires are limited in shock absorbing power. Careful, slow driving on rough or rutty roads will reduce tire costs.

Check your wheel alignment. Tires cannot give full service if subjected to the diagonal grind resulting from improper mounting or from misaligned wheels.

MAJ. GEN. SHANKS URGES MEN TO JOIN ARMY CLUB

Officers and enlisted men of the First Army Corps area were today addressed at army headquarters upon the advisability of joining the Army and Navy Club by Major-General D. C. Shanks.

The general spoke highly of the work of the club.

"It takes the blues away from many a man who may feel lonely in this city while in the service," he said.

"I do not know of any better institution that keeps men in good trim for service, maintaining their morale as well as this club.

"I hope every man in service will do his best to make this club more helpful to men in the army and navy by joining it."

GEORGE R. GREEN JOINS UNITED MOTORS' FORCE

George R. Green, the well-known automobile salesman, is now connected with the United Motors of New England at No. 916 Commonwealth avenue. Mr. Green has for many years been connected with the automobile industry in Boston and his many friends and acquaintances will be glad to know of his new affiliation.

ASK MR. FIXIT

Dear Mr. Fixit: Have noticed your advice to others in the Boston American and thought you could help me.

Have a 1917 Ford touring car which is in good mechanical condition except that when the foot brake is used it takes effect too suddenly, "locking" or stopping the car almost instantly. This "locking" has caused one axle shaft and two universal joints to break at different times. I sent the complete transmission to the Ford Service Station but they refused to do anything for me as I had altered it and also replaced the aluminum bands. I have always used standard Ford parts including transmission bands but still have the same trouble.

Thanking you in advance for any advice you can give me in this matter, I am,

Boston. H. FIXIT.

Look over your brake drum to see if it is cracked or defective in any way. The only advice we can give you is to change your brake again. Your drum is rather unusual and we cannot see how this would happen unless your brake band limited the travel of the brake.

Dear Mr. Fixit: Now that the cold weather has started in, would it be of advantage to put out the fan belt, taking off the belt? What is the object in having the fan pulley holes and the worm gear shaft bevel gear? Would one up but cannot take up play. What would you suggest? Thanking you in advance,

Boston. H. H.

Do not take off the fan belt. We seldom have weather cold enough in this section to necessitate this although radiator hoods are sometimes used. Of course you could remove your fan belt and get along nicely in very cold weather unless you had occasion to use your car when it was first or second speed for any length of time.

In regard to your other trouble there is a nut that goes down on top of the lever and a set screw holds this in place. Remove the set screw and if you cannot turn the nut by one full turn you will have to drill another hole for the set screw to hold the nut as far as you can turn it.

Dear Mr. Fixit: Your answer as to why trouble should be experienced in starting a car, even after same has been sufficiently "warmed up," would be appreciated. At all times the motor is set in motion without any difficulty whatever but at other times it is nearly impossible to start same without prolonged cranking. Your explanation as to this would appear as if the trouble is due to insufficient spark, while possibly it might be due to carburetor trouble. Carburetor of the 1916 "Stromburg" model. It might be well to state that after the motor is started, same runs very smoothly. Your early answer is requested.

N.

Your question is one which is rather difficult to answer without seeing the "patient." Your trouble may come from a temporary broken electrical current. This may be a loose connection or broken wire which forms a condenser while the motor is running due to vibration and should say that in all probability your trouble comes from a defective check valve in your float chamber of the carburetor which does not shut off the gas when the motor stops and allows the carburetor to flood. There is condensation inside of the pipe leading from the carburetor to the motor is probably the cause of your trouble. This condensation might occur leaving moisture which might penetrate even to the points of the plugs and this would only occur when the motor had stopped running. We believe if you check over what we said you will discover your trouble.

Dear Mr. Fixit: Some friends of mine have been trying to reason out this question, and not being able to do so have left it to you. Q. Why is it when you get more power to go up a hill, you lose second, whereas when you go down hill going into second, it operates as a brake and holds you back? Thanking you for answering this, I remain

Boston. J. P. H.

You change from high to second gear in going up hill in order to increase the reduction of the gear ratio, that is, the motor turns over many times faster than the rear wheels which make possible more power to the wheels. In going down hill your speed is greater than the motor and consequently the reduction is great enough allows your rear wheels to turn over slowly, and if your motor is throttled down this really acts as a brake. If you shut your spark off you will find one of the best brakes available, working against the high compression in every cylinder.

Portland, Me.

Dear Mr. Fixit: I have a 1915 Reo touring car and the lower part of the main bearing in the crank case is broken. Could you tell me where I can get it fixed as I hear the bearing has to be poured or rebabbitted in the case and I would like to know where I can get that done? Thanking you in advance I am, Boston.

You had better take your car to the Reo Service Station, No. 23 Brookline Avenue, Boston. If bearing is cracked so that you cannot drive the car of course you will have to have it towed there.

LEHIGH TIRES BREAK RECORD

Consolidated Rubber Company Offers Real Bargain in Auto Shoes

In spite of the election and business conditions the sale of Lehigh tires conducted at the Consolidated Tire & Rubber Manufacturing Company, corner of Massachusetts avenue and Tremont street, has broken all records. This has been proven by the large number of people who have taken advantage of the low prices offered and the hundreds of customers who have been satisfied.

This stock is being sold at prices which represent the manufacturing cost. This is being done for the purpose of introducing these high class tires to the automobile population of New England and while it lasts the public can purchase tires in all sizes, bearing the serial numbers and in the original wrappers, which carry a factory guarantee.

This sale will continue for only a few days longer as the great demand has reduced the consignment much sooner than was expected.

TRY BURKE FOR MURDER AGAIN

65-Mile Limit Put on Veniremen to Secure Impartial Maine Jury

Skowhegan, Me., Nov. 2.—Just one year ago today John A. Burke of Jackman was arrested, charged with the murder of Nelson W. Bartley, in Sugar Berth Woods, about two miles from Jackman, and now, on his anniversary, begins his second trial.

During his year in the county jail, his wife, who so staunchly supported him before, has remained in town working as chambermaid in a hotel and has been able to be with him almost daily.

She taught him to do various kinds of needlework and so skillful was he that two sweaters show his excellent handiwork. He has also done laundry work for himself. Sheriff Moores has given him considerable freedom.

He will be defended by his former counsel W. R. Pattangall and Thomas Leigh of Augusta and Chester Mills of Jackman.

The State will be represented by Attorney General Guy H. Sturgis and County Attorney E. F. Merrill, as before.

More than 100 witnesses have been summoned for prosecution and defence.

Medical Examiner Dr. George B. Magrath of Boston and Dr. Frank N. Whittier of Bowdoin College will testify as experts for the State.

To secure an impartial jury, 120 men have been summoned from Somerset County, South of Bingham, so that none may be residents of places within 65 miles of the scene of the murder. This is twice the number summoned to draw the trial jury from at the first trial last February.

Burke's pants will still be much in evidence for H. E. Hamilton of Auburn, N. T., and W. C. Turner of Boston, experts for defense, have made micrographs of seven bullet holes in them.

Gen. Wood's Name Left Off Voting List

Buzzards Bay, Nov. 2.—Major-General Leonard Wood arriving at his old home town of Pocasset, near here, today to cast his vote for Harding and Coolidge learned that his name had not been put on the town voting list and consequently he was unable to vote. He had made a special trip from Chicago for that purpose, he said.

Blame for failure of the general's name to get on the voting list rested with is brother John, who lives in Pocasset. General Wood sat dthat he had instructed his brother to see that he was properly enrolled. The general, keenly disappointed, left at noon for Boston.

CAMBRIDGE GAS COMPANY SUED FOR $10,000 BY GIRL

The Cambridge Gas Light Company has been sued for $10,000 by Bella Gutstein of Cambridge, a minor, through her father, Samuel Gutstein. She alleges that on May 7 she was attacked by an employe of the company.

The American Railway Express Company has been sued for $1,000 by Sadie A. Fitzpatrick of Lowell. She alleges that on February 25, her property at No. 286 Westford street, was damaged when a sleigh owned by the company struck the building.

COX IS SWAMPED IN ILLINOIS

Harding Carries State by Over 200,000; Lewis Beaten for Governor

Chicago, Nov. 2.—Illinois has gone Republican by approximately 500,000, according to unofficial returns from the State at large today. Early returns gave the Republicans a lead of 200,000 but the majority was increased steadily throughout the night.

Senator Harding led the ticket. He received a three to one vote over Governor Cox. In Cook county alone it was indicated Harding's majority would exceed 150,000.

Mayor William Hale Thompson, receiving election returns at the City Hall, announced Harding had defeated Cox in Chicago by five to one. He summoned a band of musicians with the announcement:

"It is time to play the 'Star Spangled Banner' instead of 'God Save the King.'"

Former Senator James Hamilton Lewis, Democratic candidate for Governor, was defeated by Len Small, Republican nominee, according to late returns. The former Senator, however, was leading the Democratic national ticket.

Eugene V. Debs, the Socialist presidential candidate, received scattering votes in early returns and Socialists claimed their vote would exceed that of four years ago. Many women, they said, voted for Debs.

Farley Christensen, Farmer-Labor party candidate, received scattering votes. In most polling places the election officers neglected to tabulate his vote.

Westfield Votes to Become a City

Westfield, Nov. 3.—Westfield has voted to become a city. It will be the thirty-ninth city of the Commonwealth. The vote was: Yes, 2,606; No, 1,414. The one-day-off-in-eight for policemen was rejected. The vote was: Yes, 1,701; No, 2,095.

Standard List Prices

Yes, we started something! Something has got to be done about the tire situation and we are the fellows who are going to make it happen.

This is no "closing out" sale or high pressure method of getting something for nothing. Not a single tire in this lot but what lives up to the most we say about it—absolute first quality and guaranteed for 5000 miles—no seconds, rebuilts or other excuses.

A direct factory offer on a brand as good as ANY tire manufacturer can make them—and at prices never before heard of in New England. All sizes and styles wrapped in the original wrappings and bearing the factory name and serial number.

IF you know a real tire when you see one and you believe that dollars saved are dollars earned, come out here and stock up on Lehigh tires for an entire season.

You may have to look for a space to park your car and you may have to elbow your way through the crowd in our store, but it will be well worth your trouble.

Monday's crowd surpassed anything we expected. Tuesday was naturally larger as the good word got around by word of mouth. Today we may run short of some sizes. A word to the wise is sufficient.

The days of wibble and wobble have passed. Let us all pull together for good business, normal prices and prosperity. TIRES HAVE GOT TO COME DOWN and we're going to start the ball rolling. Just look over these sensational prices.

BAY STATE WOMEN REJECT LEAGUE

Consign to 'Abysmal' Defeat Issue Which Would Send Sons and Brothers to Fight Wars for Foreign Nations.

The women of Massachusetts, in common with the rest of the country, overwhelmingly repudiated the League of Nations.

They decided that no foreign country shall summons their sons and brothers abroad to fight a war that doesn't concern them; that they are not going to pledge the brawn and wealth of America to keep little nations in subjection and that they will not be a party to handing over the 46,000,000 people of Shantung to their bitterest enemy.

The greatest issue since the Civil war, the League of Nations, was sent down to an abysmal defeat, the like of which was never seen in Massachusetts history.

WOMEN ANSWER "NO."

"How will the women vote on the League?" "It all depends on who," the politicians said on the eve of election.

Governor Cox said he relied upon the women to put the League over. Governor Coolidge said, "I don't believe the women of America will surrender to any foreign jurisdiction the right to call their folks to war," and Senator Lodge said, in the closing Republican rally, that the women must answer whether they want America to sit down to any council with a nation that has more votes than this country and whether they wanted to pledge the support of America, under Article X, to maintain for all time the present boundaries of foreign nations.

Everywhere the answer was a firm, positive "No."

COX BADLY CUT.

The returns of yesterday show that Governor Cox not only failed to receive any respectable proportion of the women's votes but that in innumerable cities and towns he actually received fewer votes than President Wilson received four years ago, despite the enormously increased registration. A few samples are taken, offhand, from various sections of the State.

President Wilson carried Provincetown, on the tip end of Cape Cod, four years ago by a vote of 237 to 218. The vote this year was: Harding, 521; Cox, 74. More votes were cast in Provincetown than four years ago, evidence of women registration, yet the vote which President Wilson carried by 22 votes four years ago, when the League of Nations was not an issue, found the Democratic candidate defeated by 447 votes this year, when the League of Nations was THE issue.

Wilson got 927 votes in Wakefield four years ago. Cox got 854 this year. Hughes got 1,350 four years ago. Harding, who said, "I am going to stay out," got 2,132 this year.

Plainville cast 373 votes four years ago. This year, 632 men and women voted. Plainville gave Wilson 81 four years ago. It gave Cox and the League 44 this year. Hughes got 222 four years ago. Harding and the anti-League got 448.

INDIANS ALL HARDING MEN.

Gay Head, with its Indian population, was asked by the Democratic standard-bearer, to vote for him and the League of Nations. This real American population responded, in this fashion, to the call for foreign entangling alliances:

Harding	45

Foxboro cast 598 votes four years ago, 1,179 votes this year. It gave Wilson 173 votes four years ago. Despite the big increase in registration and actual voting, it gave Governor Cox only 166 votes this year. Wilson carried the town by seven votes four years ago. Harding carried it by 581 yesterday.

The Democrats won Hamilton four years ago, 143 to 105. The vote yesterday: Harding, 456; Cox, 196.

HULL STRONGLY REPUBLICAN.

Wilson carried Avon four years ago, 222 to 180. The vote yesterday: Harding, 378; Cox, 197. Cox and the league got 26 votes less than Wilson got, although 178 more votes were cast.

Hull was always regarded as a barometer. Hull four years ago gave both Hughes and Wilson 148. Hull yesterday gave Cox 50 votes less than it gave Wilson four years ago and gave Harding 4,621.

The similar examples of repudiation of the League of Nations by the women voters would require in the telling more space than is available.

"JOE" CANNON RETURNED FOR HIS 23D TERM

Danville, Ill., Nov. 3.—Representative Joseph G. Cannon has been returned to Congress from the Eighteenth Illinois District, according to returns today. It will be his twenty-third term in Congress.

G. O. P. GAINS 30 IN HOUSE

Returns Indicate Republican Majority of 75 and Three Socialists Elected

New York, Nov. 3.—The next House of Representatives will have a Republican majority of 75, or an increase of 30 votes over the present Republican majority, according to indications from all quarters today.

The Republican Congressional committee claims a gain of at least two Representatives in Massachusetts, two in California, two in Montana and possibly two in Kentucky. In addition gains are expected in Missouri, Michigan and Wisconsin.

In all other states where the Republicans now have large delegations in the lower house, they have held their own or bettered their standing. Illinois, New York, Iowa, Ohio, Kansas and Indiana have all returned their Republican members and in several instances have increased their strength.

GAIN IN BORDER STATES.

Throughout the solid South, the Democrats have elected their full ticket without exception. In a number of the States, Alabama, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi and in a number of districts in Texas, the Republicans failed to oppose the Democratic candidates for the lower house.

In the border States, however, including Kentucky, Maryland and Tennessee, there is every indication of a slight gain for the Republicans. In Massachusetts Congressman Gillett, Democrat, has apparently been defeated by former Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham, Republican, while Congressman Phelan, Democrat, has apparently been defeated by Maloney, Republican. Frederick H. Gillett, Speaker of the last House, has won with a big majority.

3 SOCIALISTS WINNING.

Early returns from Minnesota indicate the re-election of Andrew J. Volstead, author of the prohibition enforcement act, by a reduced majority. The re-election of Champ Clark by his constituents in Missouri is considered assured.

Returns indicate the election of three Socialists. Victor Berger, twice refused his seat, has again been elected as has Myer London and Morris Hillquit in New York. London served two terms in the House, but was defeated for re-election two years ago.

Joseph W. Fordney, chairman of the ways and means committee, has been re-elected in the Eighth Michigan District. James W. Good, chairman of the appropriations committee, was unopposed in the Fifth Iowa District.

AGED MAN HELD IN $300 BAIL ON PISTOL CHARGE

Patrick Gildea, seventy years old, of Galen street, Watertown, charged with carrying a loaded revolver, was held in $300 bail in the Waltham District Court today, pending an investigation. Gildea had been out of work for several weeks. Police believe his mind is deranged.

Diamond FAST FADELESS Dyes

Relieve Your Rheumatism For 25c.

NR does it by improving digestion, assimilation and elimination—the logical way.

NR Today—Relief or No Pay

There are three vital processes of human existence—the digestion of food, the extraction of nourishment from it and the elimination of the waste.

Let anything interfere with these processes—let them be interrupted or improperly carried on, and sickness of some kind follows.

Poor digestion and assimilation means failure to derive full nourishment from food and that in turn often means impoverished blood, nerve starvation, etc. Poor elimination means an accumulation of waste matter which poisons the body, lowers vitality, decreases the power of resistance to disease and leads to the development of many serious ills.

Rheumatism—due to some interference with the process of elimination, failure to get rid of certain body poisons—cannot be expected to yield to any medicine that fails to correct the condition responsible for it. Could any reasonable person expect to rid himself of rheumatic pain as long as rheumatic poison is allowed to remain in the body.

Think of this, it explains the success of Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) in so many cases where other medicines have failed. Thousands are using NR Tablets every day and getting relief. Why pay five or ten times as much for an untried, uncertain thing? A 25c box of Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets), containing enough to last twenty-five days—must help you, must give you prompt relief and satisfactory benefit or cost you nothing.

And Nature's Remedy is not only for the relief of rheumatism. It improves digestion, tones the liver, regulates kidney and bowel action, improves the blood and cleanses the whole system. You'll feel like a new person when you've taken NR Tablets a week. You've tried the expensive medicines and doctors, now make the real test. You'll get results this time. Nature's Remedy (NR Tablets) is sold, guaranteed and recommended by your druggist.

VANDERLIP SEES JAP MENACE

Believes U. S. Should Diplomatically Tell Them Why They Can't Enter Country

Frank A. Vanderlip, New York banker, sees disaster ahead, dissatisfaction, plotting and possible revolution unless the immigration crisis is handled ably. He believes that the question of "yellow peril" should be faced seriously, Japan informed courteously why America cannot let her citizens into this country.

Mr. Vanderlip is lecturer in the Harvard School of Business Administration, and in an interview with the Crimson, the college daily, says:

"As a consequence of the great world war, the systems of transportation that cover the earth are disrupted and the multitudes who had been receiving their foodstuffs from distant lands now find themselves face to face with starvation. It is only logical, therefore, that there should be tremendous migration to the sources of food.

"As foreigners firmly believe that the United States is a land of unlimited supply and unlimited wealth, millions of people from all corners of the globe would have already poured in upon us if it were not for the legal barriers and the difficulty of securing passports and transportation.

"Even now the problem has become so great that officials in charge of immigration are at a loss to know what to do. So many thousands are coming to Ellis Island that the congestion is frightful. What then will happen when the wartime powers granted to the President of the United States become void after March 4th and the ordinary inadequate peacetime laws become effective again?

SITUATION GRAVE NOW.

"The situation is grave now. It will become critical then. It is most serious to have increasing immigration at a time when there is bound to be industrial depression, for the result is an extensive unemployment of labor. This leads to dissatisfaction, plotting, and possibly revolution. It brings misery and suffering to untold thousands. It undermines the sound economic condition of the country.

"People must reflect upon the issues and take a definite stand. Then we may be able to assume some unified logical national policy on immigration and do away with our present shifting, wavering views. The time has long since passed when our Government should take a new stand on the subject every four years for our future is now too closely interwoven with the future of the whole world.

"I believe that three-quarters of the bad feeling that has arisen between Japan and this country is due to the unfortunate way in which we have handled the immigration question on the West coast.

"Politicians, merely trying to get votes, have voiced sentiments which are narrow-minded and unfair. While entirely unrepresentative of the feelings in this country, the utterances of these men have created almost unbelievable bitterness in the Orient.

JAPANESE PRIDE HURT

"The Japanese cannot understand why they shouldn't be permitted to enter California where there is so much sparsely settled territory, while in Japan 50,000,000 people are herded into territory of less area and are forced to garner a living off intensively cultivated land that is hardly fit for farming.

"They are a people with most tremendous national pride and are deeply offended to think that they are barred from a land that other foreign races are permitted to enter; they cannot understand why they should be discriminated against racially.

"By our blunt method, we have aggravated this feeling. If, in the future, there is a concerted effort not only by the government, but also by the people of this nation to explain our views of why we want to keep the Japanese out in a frank, courteous manner, we shall, in my opinion, eliminate a great deal of this ill feeling. Although I am very sympathetic with the Japanese and urge everyone to do his share to help them solve their perplexing population difficulty, I do not believe that this country can permit them to enter in large numbers if the present citizens of the land are going to maintain their supremacy in industry because these Orientals are so much more frugal and conscientious and hard working than the average American. It would probably be a matter of only a few years before they would gain control.

"If people will only give the immigration question serious attention we shall find some way to help them solve the problem without throwing our doors open to any appreciable extent."

American's Cheery Phone Girls Who Gave First News of Elections

When you called the American on the phone to get the first returns on the elections, these charming phone girls gave you the answer quickly and accurately. Nothing confused them during the long grind, although thousands and thousands of calls were received from all parts of the State. The credit for the American's excellent telephone service on the elections belongs to these young women. They were so busy answering calls they hardly had time to eat the luncheon provided for them. From left to right they are: Misses Grace Donahue, Katherine Skahill, Margaret Lordan, Vera Haudet, Anna Stallings, Lucy Lane and Madeline Beaton.

RETURNS GIVEN BY AMERICAN

Thousands Gather on Church Green, Enjoy Movie Show and Election Bulletins

Thousands of men, women and children crowded Church Green last night to watch the flashing of the Boston American election returns—the first and best in the city.

Men and women from all walks in life accepted the invitation extended by this newspaper, and as an election-return party it was the pleasantest and most successful the Boston American ever conducted.

From the moment the laughing, cheering, jostling crowds began to gather at the intersection of Summer, Devonshire, Bedford and Lincoln streets there was not a dull moment.

The "party" started at 5:30, with the showing of comedy pictures and features.

These reels were interspersed throughout the evening, in the periods when important bulletins from Massachusetts and the rest of the country were not being thrown on the screen. Late at night they were thrown on the top of the screen, while the bulletins were shown below.

The crowd was noisy but orderly. The people occasionally wandered out of the little square, but soon walked back.

The detail of police on duty had little to do, beyond an occasional warning to some too impetuous partisan who insisted on annoying his neighbors in his effort to follow the bulletins more closely.

There was no unpleasant crowding. There was no need of it. The clear projector and large lettering made the returns on the screen on the front of the building at No. 82 Summer street visible several hundred feet away.

More than 20,000 feet of motion picture film was shown during the evening.

The huge crowd was expertly handled by a special detail of uniformed policemen. The streets were kept clear for traffic and a passageway maintained along the south side of Summer street but so quietly that the spectators were hardly aware of the presence of police.

"Can you tell me how the election is going?"

When you called the American Election and put that question, did you visualize the scene on the other end of the wire? Here are some of the facts about it.

The young lady who gave you a cheery "hello" was smiling, otherwise the cheeriness would not have been there. There were eight of them seated about a large semi-circular table in the front part of the Boston American's editorial rooms at No. 89 Summer street. Each of them was equipped with a head set and transmitter.

At times the noise and din about them would appear as mere confusion to a novice of newspaper routine. But it was the composite returns of the presidential and State election being assembled from masses of reports and made ready to speed to the American's friends the minute they were complete.

Often several questions were fired at once at all or part of the efficient telephone octette. Not one of them lost her charming head. The operator who answered your call would permit nothing to interfere with her task until she had the information desired if it was available.

There were sandwiches, pie, cakes and coffee for the telephone girls as well as for the whole staff, which worked well into the night collecting election news.

The young women who held the chief role in giving the American's speedy election service were: Misses Grace Donahue, Katherine Skahill, Vera B. Haudet, Anna Stallings, Lucy Lane and Madeline Beaton.

IS MARRIAGE A SUCCESS? HERE IS WHAT OUR READERS SAY

The following are more interesting letters from American readers on the subject of "Is Marriage a Success?":

Marriage Editor: In my sense it depends on the individuals concerned. To be well mated in practically everything is one of the main foundations to a happy marriage. To be kind and considerate to one another is essential, as the woman of today is not like our great-grandmother, whose only interest was her home and her children. The man took care of what happened in the outer world she was happy. Would we be if our men showed us so plainly that they are lord and master? That is a thing of the past; a man should not be a tyrant, neither a nonentity. A woman should be interested in everything home needs, and the world in general. Keep up with the times, she need not be a "flapper."

I married at seventeen a man seven years my senior, whom I have known since I was nine years of age; am now twenty-three and mother of three fine children. We are decidedly happy. Two people knowing each few months courtship seeing one another only at their best, never should decide on a hasty marriage, as it only amounts to infatuation, and as a rule turns out badly. HAPPY WIFE.

OF DIFFERENT FAITH.

Marriage Editor: Is marriage a success? It surely is if you use it right. I wish I could see "Genesta" who says to think she is unhappy. I am married to a man who is twenty years my senior. I have two lovely children and I am the happiest little wife in the world. My husband is not of the same faith as I, but we don't let that interfere with our happiness. If he wants children I am ready to have them and I try to be an obedient and loving wife and mother. My husband is a devoted father and husband. Marriage is what one makes it. Be right by each other and be content to stay home; one in a while, do little things that will please your mate and you can't help but be happy.

HAPPIEST WOMAN IN WORLD.

ATTENTION, "TWENTY-TWO."

Marriage Editor: Let me answer "Twenty-Two," your witty but illogical correspondent who "never intends to be married" and at the same time doesn't "want to become an old maid." No, I don't "do!" But what a girl she is trying to tam down our females!

Twenty-Two, I am afraid, I believe that, with her, marriage would be a failure, while her impression of error at the thought of becoming an old maid arrests makes her unhappy. Poor Twenty-Two, you have been quite an unfortunate stand on this question.

What will you do? Become an old maid and deliberately throw yourself into a life of great misery and unhappiness, or will you take a chance at becoming a party to a successful marriage? It takes gameness to take the but it is often worth it—especially if you're a conservative girl as your letter implies that you are.

So don't fear. Watch for the real "1920 girl" and not for the few that you have so maliciously and wickedly described.

As to the type of girl who "looks good" with the assistance of a "drug store," let me tell you that men, yes, even "1920 boys," will pass upon a painted doll with "make-up-on eyes, but they won't take these freaks seriously. And, say, we may be a revelation to you to find out that even among 1920 boys there are some who still consider what kind of a mother and companion a girl will make.

In being married, and for Twenty-Two's sake, I will sign as "A 1920 BOY."

BRINGING UP CHILDREN.

Marriage Editor: I believe in letting my children have all their companions at home any time they want it. I am trying to make my two boys home lovers. Girls and boys who love home are almost always the ones who will make marriage a success when it is time to settle down for life.

MOLLY.

ENVIES THE TURK.

Dear Editor:

I have been married two years now, and during that time I haven't enjoyed more than ten happy days. My wife takes all my money and buys my clothes and other necessities for me. Before marriage I used to wear smart clothes, smoke the best of cigars and get a haircut every week. The boys used to call me "sport." But now I wear students' clothes (misfit) and smoke navy tobacco, which my wife buys for me, and I get a haircut about once every two months.

If I ever have more than a dollar on me I feel like Rockefeller. The boys once gave me $10 as a reminder of old times, to buy myself some collars and shirts. My wife found it out and took it away from me, blackening both my eyes while doing so.

I only wish I was that Turk, he sure knows how to handle them. Treat them rough and they like it. I only wish that I had started my wife that way. If I only had my chance over again I would lose them all and marry none.

THE SLAVE.

A CHRISTIAN GIRL.

Dear Marriage Editor: I was 25 years old when I had my first sweetheart, and at 26 I more d him. I was a girl who liked clean fun and enjoyed companionship. I taught school and did a great deal of settlement work. The very first evening I met my husband he asked to continue our friendship. I told him right then that I was a Christian girl and that I wanted any friend I had to share. I assure of going to church with me.

This I consider a point that it was in the very beginning before I cared too much for him, that I made it clear what I expected of a friend. I say important, because I don't know of anything that will knit and hold more together than having the love of God. I don't know much who tried to hold their ascendancy by physical attraction or some mutual interest in books, music, etc., but I have seen of this, when romance came along the verse that followed.

I always sing and think that my husband was originally intended for me, for I believe that no way that he was not, by any means. Nor was he even a church goer. But I couldn't see that he wasn't. At first I think he went to church only to please me. I watched him closely and I saw a change taking place in his whole attitude toward life.

It wasn't all church with us. He enjoyed sports and I made up my mind to do the same. I didn't even know what a home-run was, but I soon learned. He had a car and we took pleasure rides, we never missed church in all these years.

I never nag him, but I always pray for him, and my prayers are more than answered. It was after two years of marriage that I learned of his conversion, and I made up my mind to be glad then. I can hardly believe the change there was in all and said. It never I ever meant in it was and I take pleasure when to do so. Just the other day, on returning home from church, I said, "Hearie, don't you feel happy to live this way?" He took me in his and said, "It's the only way, after all."

MRS. HATTIE C.

She Wants a Real "Pal," No Substitutes

Marriage Editor: I have found the letters very interesting. I am waiting for my ideal. Perhaps we shall never meet, but I feel that I should be far better off living a single life than if I married any admirer for the sake of being married, in other words, to escape being an "old maid."

My heart goes out in sympathy to the woman who is living up to her part of the marriage contract, all whose husband is untrue to her. What are sickness and trials compared to the heartaches and humiliation such a woman must endure!

But I know there are fellows who regard womanhood as holy and sacred, who are looking for a companion to go through life as a "pal," each devoted to the other. Sometime I hope to meet that kind of a man, but until then—no substitutes.

PRINCETON MAPS OUT KICKING GAME TO WIN STADIUM BATTLE

TIGER LEADERS CONFIDENT OF HOLDING HARVARD

"Jeshurun waxed fat, and kicked." (Deuteronomy xxxii. 15)

By CHARLES E. PARKER.

Princeton has followed the example of Jeshurun in the first instance—that of putting on additional poundage—220 pound Stanley Kepk and 215 pound McManmon being two notable examples. And Princeton, in the Stadium game Saturday plans to copy the tactics of ancient "Jesh," in the second respect—that of kicking. Princeton is going to kick and kick and kick, and as Joe Scheerer, who will do the Princeton punting, has a considerable edge on any of the Crimson boosters, Princeton should gain yards on every exchange and possibly profit by a Harvard miscue or two.

In fact, as the local Big Three game approaches and the various factors that will enter the game are balanced and counterbalanced, the Tigers' chances of victory grow brighter and wiser reports that Harvard odds are not being covered by Princeton supporters may be true for the moment, it is doubtful if Crimson money will go begging when the crowds hit this town.

Bill Roper and Keene Fitzpatrick—and there is some question as to which one of the two is the more valuable—are the greatest pair of backs that a Tiger football team has had in years. Both are heavy, fast and punishing runners in the Big Three class. The Tiger team last had and one that has outplayed a Yale eleven since the undefeated 1911 aggregation, which defeated Harvard, 3 to 0, and Yale, 6 to 3. And the team will face Harvard with the Crimson at its greatest possibility.

Crimson Weights Seemed to Be Decisive

When, early in the year, Cambridge correspondents began jigging with joy the weight figure of Harvard's vanguard candidates, little hope was entertained for either Princeton or Yale. Two hundred and twenty pound Tommie Woods; 210-pound Merle Brown, 208-pound Jem Tolbert and 205-pound Wyman Hubbard, 195-pound Duke Sedgwick, 190-pound Howe Paxon, 185-pound Bubbles Hoyt—a meyer with a half dozen others of less conference but of equal poundage—comprised the list and the prospect of possible fore an advance inside the tackles was limited, while foreign gains through outside the tackle positions were considered very doubtful.

But things have not gone along the expected lines at Cambridge. Jim Tolbert, who had been buried before the season started as a sure All-America tackle was tried in the latter practice of the season and found to a speedy, shifty, open field and quick thinking type of player to put at such a premium. Wyman Hubbard, a second team tackle last year, who was a mighty wide worker developed into a consistent ground gainer, but he never has overcome that bothered him last year again giving him trouble, so much so that it is doubtful if he will play through either the Princeton or Yale games.

Crimson Linemen Outplayed Twice

Price Brown failed to show the caliber of guard that he was looked for and Hoyt was assigned to the squad of substitutes. Duke Sedgwick received an injury in the Centre game which was exaggerated during the first week and has remained out until to start Saturday's contest. And Merle Roper, with all of his knowledge, skills and probably will not be able to best. That is that of all the veteran 1st of Crimson tackles only Tommie Woods and Bubbles Hoyt have ever can be counted upon to the extent Harvard had expected to result upon them.

Even on all of the nine Harvard there now doubt arose as to whether the exalted opinion of the ability was justified, for the Tigers forwards and the Valparaiso forwards had given them a tussle—the Hoosiers even threatening to game and the Valparaiso eleven through a great portion of their contest.

Harvard's Advantage Less Inspiring Now

As for the tackle and end positions Harvard's weight advantage was not be quite so pronounced as was believed. Haverstock and Hoyt are the possible Crimson tackles. Love and Brown, Woods and Love, a pair of 190-pound edge with Captain Hubbard and Sedgwick, while Captain Hubbard, a 205-pound veteran, while Manning was a member of Percy Haughton's championship team, both Lambert, the star of the Tiger line in McMahon will be seeking the Tiger game with West Point and will be in the running a fine day. Hoyt will be pressed to make much trouble for Mr. Tolbert.

Tigers Have Wealth of Substitutes

And this season Princeton has a wealth of line substitutes, the leading members of which are McNairy, who played end for Exeter and Princeton; Speers, a Lawrenceville product; Lee Tyler, track team, Hoopes and Thomas, support the last season, and Dolan and Morgan, last year's freshman array.

At the wing positions the weight advantage is with the Crimson in both instances, but the Tiger ends have had greater experience. Davis, a varsity regular last season at Princeton, and LeGendre, who probably will work against the Crimson having had a varsity year at Tulane University before coming to Princeton, Independent Harvard's best end in a very ordinary collection—Johnston—is not expected to be in condition to play.

The quarterback position also seems to find the Tigers the stronger with Lourie and Murray, both beautiful backs—fast and shifty runners and fair forward passers and the latter a punter of considerable ability, ready to take Captain Hubbard's three-quarter kicking assignment. Harvard has a veteran three-year quarterback, none of whom has evinced himself as a star.

Princeton Is Even Man Against Man

Gilroy, Garrity, Scheerer, Wittmer, Lourie and Knox are the leading backfield men on the Tiger squad, all of whom compare favorably with the Harvard backs in most departments of the game. Artie Horween of Harvard however has a decided edge in the line smashing, interference-making and secondary defensive play, while Joe Scheerer of Princeton is the punter par excellence of the group.

Princeton, with the advantage in the kicking department, plans to resort to kicking on a second down report from Tigertown. This should give the Tigers an advantage on every kicking and drop-kick punt, with a chance of fumble giving Princeton the ball. Harvard territory when upon the Tigers will cut back on a somewhat similar scale in that event should not prevent the Crimson from using forward passes.

Harvard Attack More Diversified

Harvard will have perhaps a more diversified attack and unless its players decidedly greater ability than they have shown thus far, Harvard will have to push the ball more than Harry Hillebrand did past Lourie and the Tigers. The Crimson uncovered a mighty effective through tackle wedge with Captain Coolidge and Horween was used to do the really charge the opposing line, while Merton or Curtis swept through the opening.

However, Princeton scouts having witnessed the Harvard attack undoubtedly have instructed their tackles in methods of opposing it. Except for this fact Harvard has shown only its standard attack but there is every reason to believe the Crimson will employ every trick in its repertoire. Merton is to punch the line and Owen and Chase will or Fitts to scoot off the tackle or handle forward passes. If Princeton's defensive ability undoubtedly will be taxed to its limit when Harvard gains opportunities to rush the ball.

Brown-Yale Game Arouses Interest

Brown men are waxing enthusiastic over the chances of the Bruins against the Eli on Saturday for Brown will enter the game an underdog in odds, and Brown victories over Yale have not been uncommon in recent years.

The record of the Bruins however is not an impressive one, considering the caliber of its opponents for in no instance has Coach Dobson's team failed to find a first class opponent. The only strongest clashes to put the Brown were Colgate and Springfield, and in both instances there was a question as to whether Brown was the better team, although in both instances Brown won the games by 14 to 0 scores.

The chief factors in Brown's play are Williams and Albright, the ends, and Brooks and Otis, backfield men. The line, except for the ends, has failed to impress those who have witnessed the play, and Yale with a considerable weight advantage and with the majority of its cripples back in action, is very liable to run up a sizeable score.

TAD'S TIDBITS

$20,000 Stake for Tiajuana

The official announcement sent broadcast by President James W. Coffroth of the Tijuana Jockey Club, that Tijuana would hold its annual 100-day, or more, race meet, commencing Thanksgiving Day, November 25, proved welcome news to horsemen throughout the country who have been waiting his word.

Coffroth is offering a fine array of stakes, and it is his ambition to attract the stars of the Eastern tracks to Tijuana this year.

In offering a total of twenty-four purses with an aggregate value of $90,000 Coffroth is creating a record in far-Western racing which far surpasses that of Emeryville and Oakland Park in the bygone days, when racing flourished in California and those tracks were in the heyday of their success.

The Coffroth stands an at a mile and a quarter, which will be decided on Washington's Birthday and will have a valuation of $20,000, and the meadows of that historic town will be one of the attractions that will draw the cream of the Eastern thoroughbreds to Tijuana.

The blue-blooded aristocrats of the turf will again have an inning with the running of the U. S. Grant Hotel Handicap, for which $10,000 will be the prize to strive for. This race is also over a route

In no race will the purse be less than $500

Canada Cal's Chirps

A professional burglar's income is like some husbands'—between midnight and dawn.

A novelist says of his heroine, in a certain situation: "She preserved an eloquent silence." Anything so rare as silence in a woman is worth preserving.

As the fellow said when his creditor insisted upon a complete liquidation of the debt: "Your demand creates a pay-in-full situation with me."

How does the country take the daylight-saving innovation? Whatever they may say about it, the fact remains they're day-lighted.

Prohibition Commissioner proposes to dump all the nation's hard drink into the river as the only effective means of making the country dry. Somebody, at some time, must have tried that method; then people said of a man, "He drinks like a fish."

HARVARD MAY DROP CENTRE

Georgia Tech Likely to Get Place on Crimson Slate Next Fall

Cambridge hot springs have it that Georgia Tech and not Centre College will be the Southern team on Harvard's 1921 [illegible] and that Coach [illegible] is negotiating with Georgia Tech for a game with the latter the Crimson.

Along with this rumor comes the report that Harvard will [illegible] customary one-game [illegible] from various sections of the country, which the management has been trying to arrange for the past [illegible] and has had to let that of Boston being considered for 1921 games.

[illegible] Centre will be a decided departure from the [illegible] has been trying to arrange, since the decision not to many years ago put a question of [illegible] Harvard's ability to meet successful southern [illegible] will also be [illegible] from the [illegible] recent seasons. Last Saturday, the [illegible] crowd of the season presented itself for the [illegible] game, [illegible] first the football season [illegible] and in view [illegible] Harvard and Georgia Tech is forthcoming over Centre it is extremely doubtful if a Harvard-Centre game would take the Stadium next Fall

[illegible] backfield runners and fullback [illegible] plays and the latter a [illegible] ability, ready to take [illegible] Harvard has [illegible] three backfield quarterback, none of whom has displayed himself as a star

Gilroy, Garrity, Scheerer, Wittmer, Lourie and Knox are the leading backfield men on the Tiger squad, all of whom compare favorably with the Harvard backs in most departments of the game. Artie Horween of Harvard however has a decided edge in the line smashing, interference-making and secondary defensive play, while Joe Scheerer of Princeton is the punter par excellence of the group.

Princeton, with the advantage in the kicking department, plans to resort to kicking on a second down report from Tigertown. This should give the Tigers an advantage on every kicking and drop-kick punt, with a chance of fumble giving Princeton the ball. Harvard territory when upon the Tigers will cut back on a somewhat similar scale in that event should not prevent the Crimson from using forward passes.

Harvard Attack More Diversified

Harvard will have perhaps a more diversified attack and unless its players decidedly greater ability than they have shown thus far, Harvard will have to push the ball more than Harry Hillebrand did past Lourie and the Tigers. The Crimson uncovered a mighty effective through tackle wedge with Captain Coolidge and Horween was used to do the really charge the opposing line, while Merton or Curtis swept through the opening.

However, Princeton scouts having witnessed the Harvard attack undoubtedly have instructed their tackles in methods of opposing it. Except for this fact Harvard has shown only its standard attack but there is every reason to believe the Crimson will employ every trick in its repertoire. Merton is to punch the line and Owen and Chase will or Fitts to scoot off the tackle or handle forward passes. If Princeton's defensive ability undoubtedly will be taxed to its limit when Harvard gains opportunities to rush the ball.

Brown-Yale Game Arouses Interest

Brown men are waxing enthusiastic over the chances of the Bruins against the Eli on Saturday for Brown will enter the game an underdog in odds, and Brown victories over Yale have not been uncommon in recent years.

The record of the Bruins however is not an impressive one, considering the caliber of its opponents for in no instance has Coach Dobson's team failed to find a first class opponent. The only strongest clashes to put the Brown were Colgate and Springfield, and in both instances there was a question as to whether Brown was the better team, although in both instances Brown won the games by 14 to 0 scores.

The chief factors in Brown's play are Williams and Albright, the ends, and Brooks and Otis, backfield men. The line, except for the ends, has failed to impress those who have witnessed the play, and Yale with a considerable weight advantage and with the majority of its cripples back in action, is very liable to run up a sizeable score.

Criticism Hurled at Mayfield Unjust

By ROBERT E. HARLOW.

It appears from printed matter coming out of the metropolis that the New York delegation which attended the woman's national championship at Cleveland was not satisfied with conditions at the Mayfield Club. The New York Times says

When the metropolitan golf contingent returned from Cleveland there was anything but praise for the Mayfield Country Club. On the golf links there was severe criticism. Although most of the visitors had only words of praise for the way the club was conducted, there were a few who found fault with the course. Mayfield, they declared, is reported to have been built at a cost of $250,000, but in the opinion of some golfers who played there it is not worth a cent more than $25,000. Others declared that it was impossible to play good golf on the course because of the way the turf was cut up. Others declared that it was impossible to play good golf on the course because of the way the turf was cut up. Others declared that it was impossible to play good golf on the course because of the way the turf was cut up.

Criticism Seems Trifle Severe

As an eye witness of what transpired at Mayfield the criticism appears altogether too severe. The most important item in connection with a championship tournament is the course and Mayfield could not have been in better condition. The members did not complain because the women used the course. They had to expect to mingle with the members in the women's championship, but it is understood that the men will be allowed to play on the course during the tournament. It was pointed out that the women's championship did not last long and was played in the morning only. It was pointed out that the women's championship did not last long and was played in the morning only.

Only Thing Wrong Was Transportation

The only criticism that could be found with Mayfield concerned the transportation. The club was nearly ten miles out and there was not adequate automobile service to carry the players to and from the club. A great many experienced difficulty in reaching the club.

NEBRASKA WINS FROM RUTGERS

Sanford's Eleven Swamped in the Annual Election Day Game on Polo Grounds

New York, Nov 2—[illegible] Sanford's Rutgers eleven proved no match for the Cornhuskers of Nebraska at the Election Day game at the Polo Grounds, and when the whistle sounded the score was 27 to 0 in favor of the Westerners.

Nebraska took the offensive in the very start of the contest, and with no more was produced in the first period there was ample indications that the New Jersey team was to suffer for a one-sided defeat. It was in the second period that the scoring started and two touchdowns came before the first was completed. Two more were tallied in the final period, and as [illegible] Nebraska [illegible] succeeded to each touchdown with a goal from touchdown, the 27 points were produced.

Nebraska Rushed Ball in Opening Period

The first period was marked by three up-the-field charges on the part of the visiting aggregation, two of which ended with incomplete forward passes close to the Rutgers 5 yard line, and the third of which placed the ball within three yards of the Rutgers goal line just as the first was suspended.

The initial touchdown was scored at the opening of the second period, when Harper tore through left tackle for the score. Then came a series of long runs and brilliant forward passes which brought the ball to Rutgers' forward line where Captain Bahe essayed a placement goal. His kick was blocked but recovered by Swanson, who made a brilliant run. Wright and a forward pass Hobbs to Swanson, produced the second touchdown.

Rutgers opened the third period with her best display of offensive football but failed to produce results. In the final period, however, Nebraska again opened up. Moore raced through and around the Rutgers end for 10 and 20 yard gains and then carried the ball through center for a touchdown. The final score came in the period when Vorhees of Rutgers knocked a Nebraska forward pass from the hands of Wright into the arms of Swanson, who raced unopposed to the touchdown.

GREEN STARTS FINAL DRIVE

Dartmouth Star, Long on Crippled List, Back for Cornell Game

Hanover, N. H., Nov. 2—Dartmouth started its drive in preparation for what will probably be the hardest game on the schedule, the battle with Cornell at the Polo Grounds Saturday.

The [illegible] team has been coming along in the last few weeks. Regulars who have been out of the game [illegible] are coming along in fine shape especially Jim Robertson, who although he will not start the game will play part of the time. The place of Robertson should mean a lot to the team, for it has gone through most of the season with its captain, to say nothing of losing the best player on the squad.

[illegible] and George Moore are [illegible] back in the lineup against Doble's team. Not needing to take care of the ball the wide Moore has developed into a hard and fast Dartmouth line has had for the last couple of years.

Pat Holbrook and John Shearburne, both of whom have been handicapped by [illegible] ankle injuries, are [illegible] and will be used in the backfield. Both will be back in the lineup against Doble's team. Not needing to take care of the ball the wide Moore has developed into a hard and fast Dartmouth line has had for the last couple of years.

LIGHT WORK FOLLOWS SKULL PRACTICE AT B. C.

A postponed "skull session" occupied the major portion of the Boston College practice, followed by a rather light workout. Line Coach Wesley Englehorn drilled the linemen on offensive play, correcting mistakes which were very evident in the last game. Today and probably tomorrow are expected to show a couple of stiff workouts.

Every one who shows anything out of the ordinary in these scrimmages will get a chance to show off against B. U. at the Heights Saturday; very few of the regulars will stay longer than the first half.

YALE CREWS NOT TO ROW COLUMBIA ON HARLEM

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 3—Yale rowing crews will not meet Columbia eights on the Harlem River speedway next spring," as was announced last week. It has been learned at the University that an [illegible] would probably be extended to Columbia [illegible] a crew to meet the Blue on the Housatonic, above Derby, where the Blues intend to build a boathouse this Winter.

The Yale crew is not inclined to abandon the Housatonic, where rowing conditions are usually fine and where spectators have excellent vantage points, it was said

The Ricoro, corona size, is a fine, big cigar. It looks like a fifteen-center at least, and it smokes with all that fine richness—that mild bouquet—which is characteristic of all high quality, hand made cigars.

It is an indisputable fact that for size as well as quality, the Ricoro, corona, is one of the most remarkable cigar values in Boston.

Ricoro, corona size, is imported from Porto Rico duty free—and the United Cigar Stores buy the entire Ricoro output. These are two good reasons for its remarkable economy of price.

PEPPER MARTIN SCORES QUICK VICTORY OVER YOUNG SACCO

Indoor Sports

By TAD

Would Make Good

Copyright, 1920, by International Feature Service, Inc.

PUTS OVER KAYO IN SECOND

Floors Rival Soon After Round Started and Lands Finisher Soon After

By JACK CONWAY.

Vincent Martin is today holding a celebration of his own as a result of his two-round victory over Jimmy (Young) Sacco at the Armory A. A.'s show at Mechanics Building

Martin, to use the phraseology of the young men who write the political news, hopped into the lead when the polls opened and had a commanding margatin in his favor when all the ballots, otherwise known as lusty right-hand wallops, were counted.

Martin Took Lead in Opening Round

Martin was satisfied to score with snappy left hooks in the first frame. He bounced a flock of this type of wallop off Sacco's body and sent a couple of them to his rival's jaw. When the round ended, the counters merely chalked up Martin's name.

Then opened the second round. Sacco prowled merrily from his corner as if he intended to score a few points. This line of campaign didn't please Martin in the least for he immediately let a left hook bounce off the East Boston boy's jaw.

Vincent apparently was perfectly satisfied with his initial success for he came through with another left hook without any unnecessary delay. Sacco fought back courageously, but didn't have even the proverbial outside chance of gaining a victory.

Right-Hand Punches Decided the Battle

Then Martin got down to cases. He rushed in close and let loose a short right-hand sock which collided with his opponent's chin. Sacco kissed the canvas and thought of equal rights and such things. He elevated himself at the count of four to use the language of our friend, Thomas H. Doyle, who reads Blackstone and such gay classics.

"Show me what you're going to do to Kilbane," shouted some lesser-lunged individual from the balcony.

Martin chased Sacco a couple of times around the ring and then shot a right-hand punch to the jaw. The East Boston warrior folded up like one of those new typewriter desks the stenogs are using. The referee, or father bout, was then declared at an end.

Of course the managers got busy securing a new guy to beat Martin. Funny how they bother a bird when he is at the top of the heap.

Billy Fitzsimmons Wins From Chick Hayes

In the semi-final of ten rounds Billy Fitzsimmons of Chelsea beat Chick Hayes of Cambridge after a hard battle. It was one of those bouts which would have been called a draw in the old days.

Francis Ryan of Everett won over Kid Lee of Chelsea in eight rounds while Billy Woods of Manchester, N. H., was declared the victor in his scramble with Mickey Fitzsimmons of Chelsea.

The winning ring warriors, of course, intend to hold faith with the dear old public and give faithful service. This last announcement was issued merely to keep step with the spirit of the day

N. Y. University Wins from Trinity, 31-20

New York, Nov. 3.—New York University defeated Trinity by the score, 31 to 20. The game was exciting from start to final whistle. The New Yorkers were the first to tally. The first half ended with New York University leading, 13 to 0.

Trinity found itself in the second half and outplayed Father Knickerbocker's representatives during most of the thirty minutes of play forward passing and short end running accounted for the fourteen points they hung up in this half.

MILLER HUGGINS TO STAND PAT ON YANKS

Cincinnati, Nov. 3.—"While it is yet too early to discuss plans for next season, you can say for me that I have no present intention of making any changes in the New York American league lineup for 1921," declared Miller Huggins today. "Of course, if anybody is around offering gold dollars for dimes I shall be ready to trade, but there is nothing in sight now."

ELLER RECOVERING FROM TRANSFUSION

Cincinnati, Nov. 3 — Hod Eller, pitcher of the Cincinnati Reds, is recovering as rapidly as could be expected from a transfusion of blood operation. The big hurler went under the knife in an effort to save his wife's mother, who was at the point of death.

SPEED TEAM UP FOR TIGERS

Coach Fisher Now Putting on Finishing Touches at the Stadium

Harvard's finishing touches for the Princeton game are fast being applied. The crimson machine is gradually taking on power and working better together. The coaches seem to be getting everything right side up for the first test of the season.

In order to take every precaution against possible injuries, Coach Haverner is practicing a bit at the end of the practice periods in order to get and retain the power and courage of the team.

Havemeyer Big Aid to Harvard Team

Havemeyer is one of the outstanding stars of the Harvard team. He is a strong passing back and is highly keen on defensive play. He knows the positions of his men on the field when the opponents carry the ball.

Duke Sedgwick and Wenzell Hubbard are also fast running backs and both are still in the best of condition for the game. Both have been in the Crimson lineup for the past two years and may be counted on to play against Princeton.

IVY M. KENDRICK, Boston — MILDRED MAY BASTION, Somerville — VARONIA MacKENZIE, Worcester — EMELIA RESTIERI, Dorchester — MRS. ROBERT PHILLIPS, Jamaica Plain

ARE Boston girls the most bashful in New England? Or is $5,000 no attraction to the women of Boston? $5,000 in prizes. Given just for pictures. Yet Boston is falling far behind the outside towns in sending in entries in the Boston American's $5,000 "Loveliest Girl" contest. Remember that this "loveliest girl" contest is not merely for beauty alone, but what we want to find is really the loveliest girls. Beauty, intelligence, character—all will count in the judging. For heaven's sake, Boston readers, don't let the rest of New England swamp the office with ten entries to your one. Send in your picture today. If not yours, send in your wife's or your sister's or your sweetheart's or somebody else's sweetheart. There is a total of $5,000 in awards awaiting you. With no strings attached. Address all mail to "The Loveliest Girl Editor," Boston American, Box 238, Boston, Mass. And particularly you Boston and Cambridge people. Take a pride in this contest. The pictures of the winners and their addresses will be published throughout the country at the close of the contest. See to it that your town has its best possible entries in the contest before the day of judging comes.

TOWN NAMED FOR QUENTIN ROOSEVELT. Lebanon County in Pennsylvania, historic by reason of its association with the development of the iron industry, added a new page to its history the other day in the unveiling of a tablet at Quentin in honor of the memory of the late Quentin Roosevelt. The town was formerly known as Bismarck, and the citizens petitioned the proper authorities to change the name in 1918. The change was officially made a few weeks ago. The late Colonel Roosevelt thanked the citizens in his son's name.

"NOSE out of joint, dear?" asked Jim, when we were alone in our little sanctum after our guests had departed.

I turned absent-minded from the precious telegram I was rereading for about the dozenth time and asked

"You mean because there's to be a new bride in the family after Father Andrew marries and I'll be relegated to the ranks of the old married?"

"Miss Innocence" scoffed Jim. "I meant delicately to convey it. Val is getting back into her form again and that has evidently completely with Shelly tonight."

"Oh—Shelly!" I [illegible] welcome—twice over. You know I'm not much on dolls, and other men since I have been a [illegible]mie-boy. "Price no object!" I asked, running my fingers through my boy's hair.

"The sky's the limit," replied Jim

III.

TO go forward and find some glib word of greeting, to master herself and hide the rushing consternation which swept over her seemed impossible, and yet she did it. The shock was too unexpected, the situation too inexplicable for her to comprehend it. What she did comprehend was that she was in the midst of a hundred acquaintances who were watching her and that a false step meant a public scandal. She felt the leaping heat in her cheeks and her voice sounded strange to her ears, but she went in, and said cordially.

"Well, this is a surprise!" Then she added incoherently, "How are you?"

Irma Dellabarre was quite self-possessed.

"It looks terribly dramatic, doesn't it?" she said, smiling, "but it's quite simple. I came in, after all, and the first person I should meet was Andrew."

"Of course, my dear!"

She knew it was a lie, and, despite herself, momentarily she gave a note of scorn to the exclamation. But instantly she caught herself. Husband and wife looked at each other, each out to the quick at the humiliation they had to stand and take unflinchingly before these sudden strangers.

"I did not expect you," she said, to say something, and she looked at him in order not to look at Irma. "Are you coming out to Chilton?"

"Perhaps," he said coldly, looking at her steadily. "I thought you were in a party."

"Yes, we are," she said slowly. To stay longer was humanly impossible. "Well then, I may see you—at Chilton?" She nodded and went down a way to where the head waiter was standing at a table for two.

"Table for five, please," she said sharply, mistress of herself as she had been the night of the fete, when Tody Dawson had blundered in the minuet. She saw some one bowing to her in the haze of things, and bowed with a smile in the general direction.

"Sit down here," said Monte Bracken's voice. She took the chair he indicated, with her back to her husband, and drew off her gloves slowly, a mist before her eyes. The waiter stood at her side for his orders. She was not aware of his presence.

"Tea and buttered toast for two," said Bracken quickly. "Or—no—might as well make it for five, Philip," he added, summoning the head waiter, who knew him. Leave word at the door where we are. Mrs. Lightbody will join us."

Then he sat down.

"Talk to me," she said. "Keep talking to me."

Gradually, under the pleasant sound of words which she did not comprehend, she regained her self-control.

"Thank you," she said, drawing a long breath, but her eyes remained on her plate. "It's strange Kitty doesn't come. What time is it?"

"Half-past five."

Not for an instant had she the slightest doubt that Irma had lied to her. She had seen the truth in Andrew's eyes in that bitter moment of forced humiliation. How long had it been going on? All her anger was directed toward the woman. Yes; she had taken her revenge threefold.

"She wasn't embarrassed at all," she thought bitterly. "Quite delighted, of course."

"Tea now?"

"I don't see why they don't come," she said nervously.

"Kitty never is on time, you know."

"Yes; but I want them to come," she said dully. Andrew must see all the difference that existed between his situation and hers.

"They may be waiting outside. Shall I see?"

"Please."

She thought of the anger she had shown in the first shocked moment of recognition. That had been a mistake. It had only played into Irma's hands. She should have stayed and shown her indifference, treated the situation with lightness, covered up the wound to her vanity. What a delicious revenge she had given Irma!

"What a fool I was!" she said angrily. "But she shan't have him alone."

To be sure, she continued her little game under the eye of the wife would be the last thing Irma would relish.

When She Turned They Had Gone

"She shan't have things her own way," she said determinedly, and rose. The thing to do was to accept Irma's declaration that the meeting had been accidental, and force them, under appearances of cordiality, to join the party. To her consternation, when she turned their table was empty. She was still standing when Monte Bracken returned.

"I am sorry they haven't turned up."

"It doesn't matter now," she said abruptly.

He glanced at her brilliant eyes and feverish cheeks, wondering just what to offer.

"I'm afraid they won't come at all," he said slowly.

As a matter of fact, from the first he had never expected that they would turn up.

"I doesn't matter," she said impatiently.

"Curious thing," he said, frowning. "Do you know whom I thought I saw just now? Rudy himself!"

"But he's in Chilton," she said, answering him mechanically.

"He was this morning," he replied thoughtfully.

Her imagination was racing. At one moment, she repeated to herself what she should have said to them in the first moment of her surprise. The next, it jumped to the future, construing the scene of her reproaches to Irma—the way she should demand an explanation from Andrew. The next moment, she switched to the past with feverish alarm, seeking some remembered indications which could clarify the present unbelievable revelation. Andrew—Andrew of all men! She could believe all things but that!

"I'm afraid the others have gone off on their own bent," he repeated. "What do you want to do?"

She passed her hand hastily over her forehead, touched her lips to a glass of cold water, and said,

"If you don't mind, Monte, I think I'd rather have a bite to eat now and go right home. I'm sorry to be so stupid."

"Do anything you like," he said hastily, moved by the suffering in her eyes. "We can dine here and go back by the train?"

"By the train," she said, perplexed. "And why not by the boat?"

"I prefer not, Amy," he said kindly.

"Oh, I see what you think," she said slowly. They ate their dinner rapidly. He saw her perturbation and refrained from addressing her. When the meal was ended, she said, out of a clear sky:

"I prefer to return in the yacht."

He shook his head.

"You are not in a mood to decide," he said gently. "I don't want you to do a thing you'll regret."

"You don't understand the situation," she said, looking at him. "It has nothing to do with Andrew. My husband and I have been nothing to each other for months."

"Are you sure?" he said gravely.

"Quite. Yes; I am upset, mortified, hurt, but it's not on his account. It's—it's to be deceived by her."

"Really, I had rather we did not go back alone," he said frowning.

"But if I wish it?"

"Very well."

She glanced at him.

"You are not annoyed at me?"

"I couldn't be."

"Please don't be annoyed, Monte—whatever I do."

In the antechamber, an idea came to him. He stepped in the cafe for a quick glance. He had not been mistaken. At a corner table, huddled over his glass, was Rudolph Dellabarre.

IV.

ANDREW was already home, in the broad, gabled cottage he had taken for the Summer. By the time they made the landing, she had not the slightest doubt that he would be there. Irma would have seen to that. If she felt any one to thank for this momentary return, it was the woman's need of safe-guarding appearances. She gave her hand hurriedly to Monte Bracken.

"You are very kind," she said gratefully. "Good night—and I shan't forget how you've been."

"I will do anything I can—at any time—for your happiness," he said, in a low voice.

He sprang back on the deck; the yacht backed out, and she watched it glide over the silky waters. At the bow, silhouetted against the tapestry of stars, his dark figure continued standing, still looking back at her. He had been very much of a gentleman, tactful and respecting her reticence, the true Monte Bracken of the finer mesh that occasionally flashed out below the adroit and brilliant flaneur of the world. He had left her in long silence to the tumult of her own emotions.

"He's Irma—Irma I can't forgive," she repeated to herself during long contemplation, as the shadowy goblin palaces of New York, the fiery lacework of vaulted bridges, the crowded thrones of electric lights fell behind and sank into the waters of the night. Across the bay a few sentinel-lights followed their shooting progress—faint and distant as all mankind in the complexity of the stars which hung from the firmament above her and swam up from the deeps below. What did she really feel? Was it only the treachery of a friend? At times, she had felt the tears wet on her cheeks—tears of bitter disillusions, she had told herself.

The veranda and the parlor were ablaze as she came slowly from the pier.

"Mrs. Lightbody and the others will be home later," she said to Gregory.

"Mr. Forrester arrived, madam"

"Mr. Forrester? How long has he been home"

"About an hour, madam."

She waited a moment, half expecting some message from her husband, a demand for an interview, and then went up to her room, dismissing Morley as soon as she had removed her hat and ulster. Would he come to her? The odor of tobacco was in the upper hall. He was awake.

At the end of ten minutes, which seemed an interminable hour, she made up her mind suddenly and going to his door knocked.

"Who's there?" said her husband's voice.

"It is I."

"One moment" She heard him moving hurriedly inside. "All right now. Come in."

He had dressed. He had been in his attendance at his desk and had stopped to slip into a dressing-gown. A year ago, he would never have thought of that.

"Come in," he repeated calmly. "Room's pretty heavy with smoke. I'll open a window a moment."

She stood by the door, watching him uneasily.

"Why, he isn't angry at all," she thought, troubled; "unless he is concealing it very well."

He closed the window, but, perceiving the lighted cigar on the desk, crossed over.

"I'd better get rid of this, too, I suppose," he said, tossing it into the fireplace.

"Good heavens, don't be polite!"

Constant Pursuit of Pleasure Destroys Ideals of the Heroine in Clever Tale

But she controlled herself and murmured, "Thank you."

Whatever happened, she was determined he should not have the satisfaction of perceiving the slightest trace of irritation. She refused the chair he indicated—to remain still was impossible—and going to the mantelpiece, she rested her arm on the ledge in an attitude of coquetry which had become unconscious.

"I didn't expect you back before the end of the month," she began lightly.

"Yes; I got off earlier than I expected."

"Then things are going better?"

"In a way—thank you."

"I am always glad to know something of your affairs," she said quietly.

He threw himself into an armchair, crossed his legs, caged his hands and looked at her.

"I am sorry you left Lasare's so quickly. I wanted you to come back with us."

He did not reply.

It Was a Wonderful Trip

"It was a wonderful trip; the night was heavenly. I don't know when I've ever seen the stars so beautiful," she added, trying to rouse his jealousy. I am sorry you missed it particularly because Kitty went off on some wild spree and I didn't want to come back alone with Monte."

"Why not?"

The simple question threw her into confusion.

"On account of appearances, of course. I prefer not to be talked about like some other wives we both know."

"I see."

"I am getting nowhere," she thought, before the calm of his attitude. How long had this intimacy with Irma been going on, and how serious was it? These were two things she must learn at all costs.

"So you have suddenly blossomed out into a lady-killer!" she said, smiling at him.

"I beg your pardon."

"So your are having a flirtation with Irma Dellabarre," she said, holding the smile with an effort. She felt that she was losing her control, but to him her eyes alone out like angry coals.

"I do not intend to discuss Mrs. Dellabarre," he said coldly.

"You won't pretend that her ridiculous story of meeting you by accident was the truth!" she burst out, all restraint gone.

"I have nothing to discuss," he said precisely.

"No, I should say not, because you know she told a lie and a stupid lie," she cried, in a passion. She was convinced of his guilt now, but she wanted to know if he would go to the extent of a lie. "Whatever I do, I do openly. I don't need to hide it. I don't—" She stopped. Her voice was shaking, and her eyes dangerously filled with tears. In a moment, she continued bitterly, but with more calm. "I hope you enjoyed the mortification and the shame of our meeting like that—being humiliated before others."

"What do you object to?"

"I object to deceit—to underhand methods, to a woman who pretends to be my friend in public!" she flashed out.

"Oh, that's it," he said thoughtfully. "You, of course, don't object to my friendship with another woman."

"Friendship!" she exclaimed angrily. "You needn't tell me it's just friendship. You're not that kind. If you see a woman like Irma, it's because you're interested—really interested. You are not a society hanger-on, indulging in light flirtations."

"Thank you for the distinction."

"No; you care, and you care a great deal!" she rushed on. She felt that she was showing her worst side, but she could no longer restrain the passion of wounded vanity, jealousy, and anger which flamed up. "Well, at least you know where we stand. How long has this been going on?"

"I don't intend to discuss this," he said again.

"But I do intend," she cried. "Can't you see in what a mortifying, humiliating position you have placed me?"

"I quite understand that you resent being humiliated," he assented. Then he said gently, "Unfortunately, you made the decision."

"I?"

"You know what I mean."

"Good heavens, you are not going to drag in that poor fool of a Tody Dawson!" she cried, every nerve on edge.

"I am simply recalling to your mind," he said, in the businesslike preciseness that she hated, "that I was once as sensitive to being humiliated as you are now. You speak of appearances. According to appearances, my servants had heard a man tell me a lie in my own house. They were free to draw any conclusions they pleased. That was appearances, I believe."

"This can't go on!" she said abruptly, her head in a whirl. "Andrew, we can't go on like this"

"Probably not."

She left him and walked to the window, flung it open, and stood there.

"Listen Andrew," she said, in another tone; "let's call quits. Let's begin all over again. This sort of life means nothing to me. I am willing to give up working any man you object to—all men if you ask it—"

"Even Monte Bracken?" he said instantly.

"Even Monte Bracken."

"If I give up seeing Irma."

"That is, of course, the condition. Will you start fair? Begin anew?"

THEY were kind, they were delightful, they were interested in him—he occasionally thought—as a somewhat anachronistic phenomenon. They petted, respected him, and deferred to him. He represented to them an element in life they recognised, and which had its proper niche. What they failed to acknowledge was his point of view—and this he was wise enough not to press at dinner tables and in drawing-rooms—that religion should have the penetrability of ether; that it should be the absorbent of life. He did not have to succumb to the futility of reminding them of this conviction of his at their own tables; he had sufficient humor and penetration to credit them with knowing it. Nay, he went farther in his unsuspected analysis, and perceived that these beliefs made one of his chief attractions for them. It was pleasant to have authority in a black coat at one's board; to defer, if not to ben to it. The traditions of fashion demanded a clergyman in the million, and the more unbelieving he clung to his prerogatives the better they liked it.

Although he was conscious of a certain pressure, which they gently resisted, they did not divine that the radiating and rugged young man cherished serious designs upon them. He did not expect to transform the manners of the day, especially the modern world. He was biding his time, awaiting individual opportunities.

They talked to him of the parish work, congratulated him on the vigor with which he had attacked it, and often declared themselves jealous of it because it claimed too much of him. Dear Dr. Gilman, they said, had had neither strength nor perception of modern needs; and McCrae, the first assistant clergyman, while a good man, was a plodder in imagination. They talked sympathetically about the problems of the poor. And some of them—particularly Mrs. Wallis Plimpton—were inclined to think Hodder's replies a trifle noncommittal. The trouble, although he did not tell them so, was that he himself had by no means solved the problem. And he felt a certain suspicion of discuss the riddle of poverty over champagne and porcelain.

Mrs. Plimpton and Mrs. Constable, Mrs. Ferguson, Miss Carmichael, Mrs. Larrabbee, Mrs. Atterbury, Mrs. Gray and many other ladies and their daughters were honorary members of his guilds and societies, and found time in their busy lives to decorate the church, adorn the altar, care for the vestments, and visit the parish house. Some of them did more; Mrs. Larrabbee, for instance, when she was in town, often graced the girls' classes with her presence, which was a little disquieting to the shilly of immigrants; a little disquieting, too, to John Hodder. During the three months he had acquaintance with Mrs. Larrabbee's death, she had, with characteristic grace and ease, taken up philanthropy, became, in particular, the feminine patron saint of Galt House, non-sectarian, a rescue home for the erring of her sex.

Women Like Mrs. Constable

There were, too, in this higher realm of wealth and of fashion which Hodder plunged, women like Mrs. Constable (much older than Mrs. Larrabbee) with whom philanthropy and what is known as "church work" had become second nature in a well-ordered life, and who attended with praiseworthy regularity the meetings of charitable boards and committees, not infrequently taking an interest in individuals in Mr. Hodder's classes. With her, on occasions, he did discuss such matters, only to come away from her with his bewilderment deepened.

It was only natural that he should have his moods of depression. But the recurrent flow of his energy swept them away. Cynicism had no place in his militant Christianity, and yet there were times when he wondered whether these good people really wished achievements from their rector. They had the air of saying "Bravo!" and then of turning away. And he did not conceal from himself that he was really doing nothing but labor. The distances were great; and between his dinner parties, classes, services and visits he was forced to sit far into the night preparing his sermons, when his brain was not so keen as it might have been. Indeed—and this thought was cynical and out of character—he asked himself on one occasion whether his principal achievement so far had not consisted in getting on unusual terms with Elden Parr. They were not looking who thought so, and who did not hesitate to imply it. They evidently regarded his growing intimacy with the banker with approval, as in some sort a supreme qualification for a rector of St. John's, and a proof of unusual abilities. There could be no question, for instance, that he had advanced perceptibly in the estimation of the wife of another of his vestrymen, Mrs. Wallis Plimpton.

The daughter of Thurston Gore, with all her astuteness and real estate, was of a naivete in regard to spiritual matters that Hodder had grown to recognise as impermeable. In an evening gown, with a string of large pearls resting on her firm and glowing neck, she appeared a concrete refutation of the notion of worth. She triumphed in an unconscious phelisophy of material common-sense. However, in parish house affairs, Hodder had found her practical brain of no slight assistance.

"I think it quite wonderful," she remarked, on the occasion at which he was the guest of honor in what was still called the new Gore mansion, "that you have come to know Mr. Parr so well in such a short time. How did you do it, Mr. Hodder? Of course Wallis knows him, and sees a great deal of him in business matters. He relies on Wallis. But they tell me you have grown more intimate with him than any one has been since Alison left him."

There is, in Proverbs or Ecclesiastes, a formula for answering people in accordance with their point of view. The rector modestly disclaimed intimacy. And he curbed his curiosity about Alison for the reason that he preferred to hear her story from another source.

"Oh, but you are intimate!" Mrs. Plimpton protested. "Everybody says so—that Mr. Parr sends for you all the time. What is he like when he's alone, and relaxed? Is he ever relaxed?" The lady had a habit of not waiting for answers to her questions. "Do you know, it stirs my imagination tremendously when I think of all the power that man has. I suppose you know he has become one of a very small group of men who control this country, and naturally he has been cruelly maligned. All he has to do is to say a word to his secretary, and he can make men or ruin them. It isn't that he does ruin them—I don't mean that. He uses his wealth, Wallis says, to maintain the prosperity of the nation! He feels his trusteeship. And he is so generous! He has given a great deal to the church, and now," she added, "I am sure he will give more."

Hodder was appalled. He felt helpless before the weight of this onslaught.

"I don't say he will continue to assist, as he has in the past," he managed to say.

"Of course it's your disinterestedness," she proclaimed, examining him frankly. "He feels that you don't want anything. You always strike me as so splendidly impartial, Mr. Hodder."

Fortunately, he was spared an answer. Mr. Plimpton, who was wont to apply his gifts as a toastmaster to his own festivals, hailed him from the other end of the table.

And Nelson Langmaid, who had fallen into the habit of dropping into Hodder's room in the parish house on his way uptown for a chat about books, had been struck by the rector's friendship with the banker.

"I don't understand how you managed it, Hodder, in such a short time," he declared. "Mr. Parr's a difficult man. In all these years, I've been closer to him than any one else, and I don't know him today half as well as you do."

You Needn't Eat Me Up

"I didn't manage it," said Hodder, briefly.

"Well," replied the lawyer, quizzically, "you needn't eat me up. I'm sure you didn't do it on purpose. If you had,—to use a Hibernian phrase—you never would have done it. I've seen it tried before. To tell you the truth, after I'd come very fast that you were going to rarely took any vital turn oddly contributed to the increasing permanence of the city. To talk, also, on any topic relating to the affairs of the day were merely to announce Parr's dogmas—sometimes, and Hodder's own opinions on such matters were now in a strange and unsettled state. Mr. Parr liked best to talk of his treasures, and of the circumstances during his trips abroad that had led to their acquirement. Once the banker had asked him about parish house matters.

"I'm told you're working very hard—stirring up McCrae. He needs it."

"I'm only trying to study the situation," Hodder replied. "I don't think you quite to justice to McCrae; he is a most capable and faithful and seems to understand these people thoroughly."

Mr. Parr grunted.

"And what conclusions have you come to? If you think the system stinks, why don't you do away with it altogether?"

"I'm not quite ready for conclusions—yet," said the rector, with a touch of sadness. "Perhaps I demand too much—expect too much."

The financier, deep in his leather chair under the shaded light, the tips of his fingers pressed together, looked at the younger man thoughtfully, but the smile lingered in his eyes.

"I told you you would meet problems," he said.

II

Hodder's cosmos might have been compared, indeed, to that set forth in the Ptolemaic theory of the ancients. Like a cleverly carved Chinese object of ivory in the banker's collection, it was a system of spheres, touching, concentric, yet separate. In an outer space swung Mr. Parr; then came the scarcely less rarefied atmosphere of the Constables and Atterburys, Fergusons, Plimptons, Langmaids, Prestons, Larrabees, Greys, and Gores, and then a smaller sphere which claims but a passing mention. There were, in the congregation of St. John's, a few people of moderate means whose houses or apartments he rarely visited; people to whom modern life was increasingly perplexing.

In these ranks were certain maiden ladies and widows who found in church work an outlet to an otherwise circumscribed existence. Hodder knew them individually in his daily rounds. There were people like the Bradleys, who rented half a pew and never missed a service. Mr. Bradley, an elderly man whose children had scattered, was an upper clerk in one of Mr. Parr's trust companies; there were bachelors and young women, married and single, who taught in the Sunday school or helped with the music. For the most part, all of these mentioned above belonged to an element that once had had a comfortable and well-recognised place in the community, yet had somehow been displaced. Many of them were connected by blood with more fortunate parishioners, but economic pressure had scattered them throughout new neighbourhoods and suburbs. Tradition still bound them to St. John's.

With no fixed orbit, the rector cut at random through all of these strata, and into a fourth. Not very far into it, for this apparently went from the surface to depths. Very considerable of which made him dizzy. The parish house seemed to float precariously on its surface.

Owing partly to the old-fashioned ideas of Dr. Gilman, and partly to the conservatism of its vestry, the institutions of St. John's was by no means up to date. No settlement house, with day nurseries, was established in the slums. The parish house, built in the early nineties, had its gymnasium hall and glass and reading rooms, but it was not in these rooms that the moving times would be called modern. Presiding over its activities, and surrounded by a pale but earnest young man recently ordained, was Hodder's first assistant, the Rev. Mr. McCrae.

McCrae was another puzzle. He was fifty and gaunt, with a wide flat forehead and thinning gray hair, and wore steel spectacles. He had a numerous family. His speech, of which he was sparing, bore strong traces of a Caledonian accent. And this, with the addition of the fact that he was painstaking and methodical in his duties, and that his sermons were orthodox in the sense that they were extremely non-committal, was all that Hodder knew about him for many months. He never doubted, however, the man's sincerity and loyalty.

But McCrae had a peculiar effect on him, and as time went on his conviction deepened that his assistant was watching him. The fact that this tacit scrutiny did not seem unkindly did not greatly alleviate the impatience that he felt from time to time. He had formed a higher estimate of McCrae's ability, and had found it generally prevailing throughout the parish and in spite of, perhaps because of his attitude was drawn towards the man. This attitude, as Hodder analyzed it from the expressions he occasionally surprised in his assistant's face, was one of tolerance and experience, contemplating, with a faint amusement and a certain regret, the wistful expectancy of youthful vitality. Yet it involved more. McCrea looked as if he knew—knew many things that he deemed it necessary for the new rector to find out by experience.

But he was a difficult man to talk to.

If the truth be told the more Hodder became absorbed in these activities of the parish house, the greater grew his perplexity, the more acute his feeling of incompleteness; or rather, his sense that the principle with somehow fundamentally at fault. Out of the waters of the proletariat they fished, assiduously and benignly, but at random, and the specimens brought them, as it were, blinking to the light, and held them by sheer physical grip. And sometimes, when they slipped away, dived after them. The young curate, Mr. Pumpkinhead, for the most part did the diving; or, in scriptural language was the searching after the lost sheep.

The results accomplished seemed indeed, as Mr. Parr had remarked, strangely disproportionate to the attention and labor lavished upon them. The Italian mothers appeared stolidly appreciative of the attention of the ladies who brought the kindergarten, in taking their charges off their hands for three hours a morning, and the same might be said of the Jews and Germans and Russians. The newsboys enjoyed the gymnasium and reading rooms; some of them were drafted into the choir, yet the singing of "Te Deums" failed somehow to accomplish the miracle of regeneration. The boys, as a rule, were happier, no doubt, the new environments not wholly without results. But the rector was an idealist.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

What Has Happened So Far

In one of the big Western cities where the inrush of business has crowded the homes of the wealthy to the suburbs, conservative St. John's church has selected a new rector, Rev. John Hodder, picked by Eldon Parr, the city's richest man. The new rector learns Parr is the boss of the church. He takes a special liking for the rector. But the rector finds he is getting nowhere. His brand of old-fashioned, left-it-to-heaven Christianity isn't reaching even the wealthy not-offend-anyone sort of religion members of his congregation. It sets him thinking and he finds his anchors slipping. Go on with the story today.

Oil Land Distribution Causes Scramble to Buy Shares of This Railroad

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks were weak in New York at noon, the market falling to rally to any second hour. It was an active, transactions for that period aggregating 571,900 shares, southern Pacific being the feature for both strength and activity. It shaded its highest prices during the forenoon, but remained up about five points. Among other strong stocks were Associated Oil and Royal Dutch. Weak issues included Sumatra. Woolen common, which sold at a new low for the year. Baldwin Locomotive, Chandler, Corn Products, Crucible, International Paper, Republic Steel and United Fruit. They were off from two to nearly six points at their lowest. United Fruit showing the largest loss. Call money opened at 9 per cent. Demand sterling was up a little, standing at $4.14.

HAD A STRONG START.

Prices advanced at the opening, initial gains ranging from fractions to more than two points, leaving aside Southern Pacific. It jumped more than five on the sale of 25,000 shares, several quotations coming in a bunch. A wire from New York said "there was a wild scramble" to buy it and it was taken in large blocks. After the excitement subsided somewhat the opening was fixed at from 110½ to 109¾ and 111. The strength of this stock was due to an official announcement of an intention to distribute oil land equities to stockholders. It sold at its 1920 high. So did Seneca, Kelly-Springfield and Sears Roebuck established new lows for the year. It was not long after the opening before the market began to react, and before the first hour was over it was weak, point or more losses being common. Southern Pacific continued active and strong. Oils and steels were irregular in movement, but rails were firm for awhile. Motors had a strong beginning. During earliest trading there was a better tone to industrials in general.

STOCKS AND THE ELECTION.

There was surprise in some quarters because, with betting at long odds on the Republican candidate, the market did not show more strength before the election. The answer to that is that it will be months before a change of administration takes place and months afterwards before any great business benefit can result from new governmental policies. With labor disposition is feared and money rates are high. The market has much that is adverse to discount before it can reflect a better period.

Strength in Seneca is due to steady accumulation of that issue in anticipation of development of oil lands. Control showed a little strength at the outset, but weakened with the rest of the list.

EXPORTERS MUST GRANT LONG-TIME CREDITS

In the opinion of Eugene Meyer, who was managing director of the War Finance Corporation, exporters will find it imperative to grant long-time credits in order to obtain foreign trade, he declared. It will be difficult to establish dollar credits in Europe without government assistance.

William C. Redfield, former Secretary of Commerce, calls attention to the fact that foreign nations owe the United States more than $14,000,000,000 and means of payment is not visible. He says that as creditor this country must help in devising means to settle this debt and in his opinion the best method is by the extension of adequate credits.

SEEKS $2,000 DAMAGES FOR AUTO INJURY

The Middlesex & Boston Street Railway Company and the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company have each been sued for $1,000 by Lyman D. Wilkins of Cambridge. He alleges that on June 15 while driving his automobile in Concord, he was injured and his car damaged when Middlesex & Boston car struck an automobile owned by the telephone company. The latter machine collided with the car.

MALDEN ELECTRIC CO. SUED BY BOSTON MAN

Phillips Colla of Boston has sued the Malden Electric Company for $5,000. He alleges that on February 26, while on the company's property, he was injured by the negligence on the part of the company.

Cotton Market Opening

New York, Nov. 3.—Any bullish effect that the election of Harding might have had on the market was lost on the weakness in the cotton market at the opening today. Lack of interest of southern bears selling on an active scale and by reports that the crop was in bullish hands appeared to be running influences. The first prices were unchanged to 5 points higher, with the active months 5 points further, thus showing a net loss of the day's decline of 30 points to 50 points on January. The weather map showed lower temperatures over the belt. Spot prices: December 21.20; January 20.80; March, 20.65; May, 20.40; July, 20.20; October, 19.75.

Chicago Grain Market

Chicago, Nov. 3.—Wheat opened 1@1½c higher, corn was ¼@⅝c higher and oats were ¼@½c higher. Provisions were unchanged to 5c lower. Prices: Wheat, December, 2.20@2.20½; May, 2.24@2.24½. Corn, December, 1.50@1.50½; May, 1.50½@1.50¾. Oats, Nov., 1.09; Jan., 1.09½.

New York Sub-Treasury Loss

New York, Nov. 3.—The Sub-Treasury lost $1,400,000 in cash through banks during the cash hot loss since Friday of $2,575,000.

September exports of petroleum were larger than the total for August, being 736,428 against 532,928 barrels.

Oil Field Items

The big Standard Oil of New Jersey well on Lot 229-235, Section 3, Ranger field, brought under control after running wild for several weeks. It is producing 20,000 barrels daily but the flow will be confined to 25,000. The well is 2,000 feet south of the Texas Company well.

The mail communication from Tampico states that the New England Fuel Oil Company, a subsidiary of the Magnolia Petroleum Company, will build a 6-inch pipe line from the terminal at San Manuel, near Tampico, to Serro de Salvacion, a distance of 30 miles, from which point connection will be made with the Mexican Gulf pipe line. The Mexican Gulf on Mexican Gulf soon will be the largest well in the federal zone in the middle of the Tuxpan-Tampico field. The well has been shut-in pending a decision.

The Oil City Petroleum Co. has number completions as follows: Seven new wells drilled in during September for the use of the Mid-Northern Pipe Line Company.

The Mid-Northern Oil Company, a subsidiary of the Midwest Refining Company, has completed its second well in Car Creek field, Montana, with estimated production of 1,000 to 2,000 barrels daily, although gas was penetrated early in the well.

Dividend Declarations

Spencer Petroleum Corporation inaugurated quarterly distributions with declaration of dividend of 6 per cent., payable in one-year 6 per cent. notes, dated April 20, 1921, or cash for conversion into common stock at maturity at $12.50 a share.

Iron Products Corporation declared a dividend of 1¾ per cent. on preferred stock, payable to holders of record November 15.

Texas Packers' Association declared a quarterly dividend of $2 a share, payable November 10 to holders of record October 30.

Mexican Gulf Oil Company declared a dividend of 2½ per cent. on preferred stock, payable December 15 to holders of record November 15. This dividend represents a partial distribution of the proceeds of the sale of the company's Second Round and Fifth Creek properties.

Great Western Sugar Co. declared a quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent., conditioned upon the same amount on common stock and an extra dividend of 3¾ per cent. on the common.

Connells Co. declared a dividend of $1 on the preferred, payable December 15 to holders of record November 30. An initial dividend of 50 cents a share was paid on this issue on June last.

SENECA SELLS AT NEW HIGH

Boston List Opens Firm, but Becomes Irregular; Trading Quiet on the Curb

The Boston market had a strong opening and retained a fairly good tone during the first hour, but became irregular before noon, reflecting New York to some extent. Trading was quiet and the price range rather narrow. Seneca went to a new high for the year on the Curb as well as on the one in aMhhattan. United Fruit began with a decline of three points and was off six points by 11 o'clock. Calumet & Hecla dropped 10%. Mohawk and Wolverine were strong coppers, the former falling, however, to hold all its advance. Most fluctuations were small.

Among stocks to make fractional gains were Boyle, Butte & Butte, Seneca, Boston Elevated, National Leather, Swift & Co. and Swift International. Small losses were sustained by New Haven, Island Oil, Mexican Investment, Waldorf and American Telephone. Among issues to sell unchanged were Copper Range, Osceola, Massachusetts Gas, United Shoe, American Sugar common and preferred, Eastern Manufacturing, Gray & Davis and Libby, Highcart, Gray & Davis and Edison Consolidated.

CURB MARKET QUIET.

The Curb market had a very quiet opening and the price movement was very limited then and later. The standouts were Boston and Montana, Merrimac Development, Mutual and Mexican Investment. Waldorf and American Telephone. Among issues to sell unchanged were Copper Range, Osceola, Massachusetts Gas, United Shoe, American Sugar common and preferred, Eastern Manufacturing, Gray & Davis and Libby, Highcart, Gray & Davis and Edison Consolidated.

More Farms in the U. S.

Census reports indicate that unoccupied land in this country is fast being tilled. In 1920 the United States had 6,448,998 farms against 6,361,502 in 1910 and 5,737,372 in 1900. Most of the increases are in Pacific Coast States, Rocky mountain and Atlantic Southern States, with small gains in Texas and Tennessee.

Tobacco Holdings

On August 1 this year, according to a Census Bureau bulletin, the holdings by tobacco manufacturers and dealers in this country included chewing, smoking, snuff and export types amounting to 449,197,325 pounds against 1,013,719,124 pounds on January 1, 1920, and 962,807,855 pounds and July 1, 1920, and $91,633,522 pounds on October 1, 1919.

PLEADS CAUSE OF IRELAND

Eileen Huban Resents Atrocities of British Soldiers in Erin

By FRED J. McISAAC

If you would like to get away from the Irish question, don't talk to Eileen Huban, the heroine of "Paddy, the Next Best Thing," because that young woman is simply burning up with it. Miss Huban is suspected by David Belasco and others of being the coming emotional star of the American stage, though she is now playing a light comedy.

When she begins to tell you how she feels about the martyrdom of MacSwiney, the devastation of Ireland and the personality of Lloyd George, with his coat of chain mail and his thousands of soldiers, you don't suspect it, you know it. That girl has a vitality, a keenness and power to express her feelings that would fire a marble statue.

What she could do with a mob if she ever got a chance to address one I shudder to think. There used to be a lady visitor to these shores who was styled the Irish Joan of Arc, but she never impressed me as an exhorter as Miss Huban did.

NATIVE OF IRELAND.

Eileen Huban is an unusual figure on our stage. She lived in a little village in Ireland, Lough Rea in the way, to be exact, until she was fifteen. In the three or four years she has been on the American stage she has impressed her personality very firmly upon American theatre-goers, but she has never yet been turned loose in a rip-roaring, furniture breaking, emotional role of the sort that Leslie Carter favored. She is marking time in comedy until she gets it.

When you first glimpse Miss Huban in her up-to-date-minute costume, her striking dark eyes and her air of "chicness" you say "Ah, French without a doubt." Then she flashes on a pleasant and wholesome smile. I might say grin, and you revise your impression, and say, "Oh, no, Irish."

There is a dash of French in Miss Huban, she freely admits, but she is mostly Milesian, and proud of it. Furthermore she can talk and sing in the Gaelic language, which the Irish can do unless they come from Galway.

"I have never changed in my love for Ireland and the beautiful places in which I spent my youth. When I think of the peaceful villages I know so well burned and destroyed by alien invaders, well I just feel like striking out blindly. I almost go mad.

RESENTS INVASIONS.

"There is a cathedral in Lough Rea. It is only a little village, but New York or Boston would be proud of that cathedral by the lake, a wonderful church, built to replace a cathedral burned by Cromwell. Its lovely spire can be seen for many miles across the lake and hills. There are two beautiful convents, oh, it is a village to be proud of. And drunken Black and Tans reel through its streets and the streets of a hundred towns and villages like it."

If I had taken notes I could have printed columns of such description, for this girl knows how to make word pictures if she does detest pen and paper, as she says. And if you would like to know if cultured and well bred Irish people sympathize with the uprisings in Ireland, Miss Huban is a good example.

People Vindicate Hearst Policies by Killing League of Nations

The people have vindicated the Hearst newspapers by repudiating the League of Nations. President Wilson in his last Jackson Day speech at Washington accepted the challenge of William Randolph Hearst to refer the question of the League of Nations to the people to be decided by referendum vote. The entire Democratic campaign which ended yesterday in overwhelming defeat for the Democratic party was fought on the league issue. The people followed Mr. Hearst's suggestion and decided for themselves against the league. Mr. Wilson's acceptance of the Hearst plan for a referendum was expressed as follows by the President in his Jackson Day message:

"If there is any doubt as to what the people of the country think on this vital matter, the clear and single way out is to submit it for determination at the next election to the voters of the nation, to give the next election the form of a great and solemn referendum—a referendum as to the part the United States is to play in completing the settlements of the war and in the prevention in the future of such outrages as Germany attempted to perpetrate."

The "Solemn Referendum" on the League of Nations

The "Solemn Referendum" to the American people which President Wilson demanded on the League of Nations has been held. The people have rendered their verdict. The verdict is against the League of Nations. It is an overwhelming verdict in numbers and in character. It is a verdict rendered both by the men and the women. Both sexes have, on the first election on which they have voted together, rendered the same decision and rendered it with equal emphasis.

The League of Nations which President Wilson brought back from Paris is dead so far as the United States is concerned with it. It has died a deserved death. It was a faithless scheme. It was based upon the dishonoring of the declared objects of the war, upon the repudiation of the fourteen points, upon the reckless abandonment of all our most sacred policies and upon the flaunting of the advice and warning and precepts and examples of all our most distinguished and honored statesmen.

The United States will return to its old and noblest role. She will try to set a good example for the rest of the world to emulate. She will not try to impose her policies or her principles upon an unwilling world by force. She will be content to let the invincible truth fight its own battle, confident that where our example is good, the favorable destiny of the world will compel other nations in due time to follow us. Thus, the world will take what we have of good to offer and may reject our mistakes. We shall never again, we hope, attempt a scheme to carry through the world our armed opinions.

It is with great satisfaction that the Hearst papers contemplate the results of this election. We were the first considerable newspapers to throw down the gauntlet to the President when he returned from Paris and defiantly announced the terms of his League of Nations. We were the first to tell the country that the League was a betrayal of the principles upon which and the objects for which we fought the war.

We were the first to see that the League and the treaty with which it is interwoven was a base violation of the terms of the armistice and a rank betrayal of the confidence of the German people in our honor. That the American people by a vote so overwhelming take our view of a question so important is extremely gratifying.

But the election yesterday settled more questions than the League of Nations. It undoubtedly was an order from the American people to our government to return to the Constitution, to restore our civil liberties and to make the country again what it ought always to be—a country governed by laws and not by men, whether those men be President or Judges or Prosecuting Attorneys.

The autocracy under which we have suffered and been misrepresented, during the last two years since the armistice, will soon be over. Whether the autocrat meant well or ill the American people are too busy to consider. He will soon be forgotten and will only be remembered as the man who by reason of his office and the peculiar juncture of the world's affairs was able to summon the American people to a solemn judgment in reaffirmation of old principles and old policies under the guidance of which the American people have weathered every storm.

18,000 Rescued From John Barleycorn by Dry Law

Recently, for the first time, the people of Boston and of the Commonwealth had a chance to review the record of prohibition in this city.

It is a most encouraging record. It shows eighteen thousand less arrests in six months than in the same six months under the licensed sale of liquor. Moreover, it explodes the great bugaboo that people will use habit-forming drugs as a substitute for liquor. Only one hundred more arrests were made for using drugs during the prohibition period. This means nothing at all. A little spurt on the part of the police or the District Attorney's office, happening in this period, would more than account for the extra hundred.

Think what eighteen thousand less arrests for drunkenness in this brief period means to the people of Boston. Think how much it has saved to the pride and health and comfort and prosperity of the wives and children of this community. Think how much it has meant to the grocery man, the provision man, the coal man, the landlord, the drygoods man and everybody who does business with those eighteen thousand who, in the past, were arrested for drunkenness.

Eighteen thousand is merely an infinitesimal indication of the benefits brought by prohibition, for if eighteen thousand less men had been arrested, then there must have been two hundred thousand fewer cases of drunkenness in the city during that period. Think of the victory of self-respect and of prosperity, not only to the drunkard, but to his family, that is evidenced by the story of eighteen thousand fewer arrests for drunkenness!

No wonder that both Mr. Harding, the Republican candidate for President, and Mr. Cox, the Democratic candidate for President, and the candidates for all the parties agreed, in the language of Mr. Cox, that the "cause of intoxicating liquors is as dead as Julius Caesar."

More Truth Than Poetry

The Girl He Left Behind

By S. E. KISER

THE girl he left behind him sighed as only maidens may;
He saw tears glisten in her eyes, and kissed them all away;
She let him know that she would care, and joy was in his breast
For whom success was waiting where the sun sinks in the West;
In whispers, tremulous and sad, she promised to be true,
And to the proud hopes that he had came others that were new.
"The way," he said, "is long,
But you have made me strong;
I'll win where wealth and honors are, and bring them back to you!"

THE girl he left behind him turned, with pallid cheeks, that day,
And went to sit alone and weep her new-learned grief away;
She felt his kiss upon her lips—the first he dared to claim—
And every passing breeze, it seemed, kept whispering his name;
Her fancies all went winging to the golden-tinted West;
A sorrow that was deep and new, found lodgment in her breast;
That night she watched the sun
Go down, and prayed for one Whose former plea she carelessly had answered with a jest.

THE girl he left behind him learned to keep her tears away,
And later learned to hear the words another had to say;
For her the glorious, golden West lost all romantic charms,
She found it comforting to rest within another's arms,
And he that ventured bravely where the world was rich and new Found one who taught him gladness there and made his dreams come true.
The girl he left behind
Came often to his mind;
"Alas," he thought, "how long and sad the years must seem to you."

To the Editor

Raps American Bar Ass'n.

Protest against the un-American attitude of the Journal or the American Bar Association has been made by Daniel T. O'Connell, in a letter to Hon. William A. Blount, President of the Association. The letter follows:

Hon. William A. Blount, President, American Bar Association.

"Pensacola, Fla.

"Dear Sir:

"The October issue of the Journal of the American Bar Association contains an editorial on page 83, entitled "The Situation in Ireland," which commits the Association to the position that Ireland is entitled only to local self-government.

"There are thousands of lawyers of Irish blood, and also of the blood of other races, who will resent publicly this act of the Board of Editors who supervise the publication of the Journal. I think the editors should be told by you, as President, that they have no right to commit the Association to such a position.

"My money as a member of the association aids in providing financial support for the Journal; so does the money contributed as dues by other members who feel as I do. It is not right, and it is not just that our money should be used to insult us. There has been altogether too much of a tendency on the part of those who exercise an active influence in the affairs of the American Bar Association to reflect the views of the British Bench and Bar and British policies.

"The Association should be American in all respects. When the American colonies sought freedom and independence, there were many hundreds of the same type now decrying the appeal of Ireland, who then came forward to insist that colonial form of government was the best form of government for the American colonies. Fortunately for you and me and all other American citizens, the colonial form of government was overthrown and independence secured.

"I not only respectfully ask, but insist that this protest be taken up by the Executive Committee of the Association and acted upon definitely.

"Respectfully,

(Signed) "DANIEL T. O'CONNELL."

Popular Fallacies Exposed!

BOSTON people are cold. That's one of the most widely spread of popular fallacies current in this country. Like all popular fallacies, it rests on misinformation.

Boston people are as warm-hearted as the people of any other city in the country. Bostonians are like a coal fire, hard to start, but enduring in its warmth when well ignited.

* * * *

It used to be a smart saying that "Westerners believe you innocent until you are convicted, but Bostonians convict you first, then ask you to prove yourself innocent."

Again Boston and Bostonians are maligned. Perhaps in that nebulous hinterground nationally dubbed as "a state of mind," aloofness is akin to coolness. The "state of mind" element in Boston is but a small part of the whole city.

* * * *

Get confused in the subway as most strangers do. Ask the first comer how to reach some Back Bay hotel. The Bostonian loses his car in order to set you right on your way.

Show an interest in Harvard College, Bunker Hill, Concord and Lexington—the best place to get a plate of beans even—and your Bostonian inaugurates a personally-conducted excursion to show you the best way to your desired goal.

Want to borrow money? Want to get away with "easy" money? There's a new one born in Boston every minute. Talk about a Bostonian making a hit in the West! You Westerners just tell the first Bostonian you meet you come from the land of mines—silver, lead, zinc, any old kind of metal, and Mr. or Mrs. Bostonian gets out the family stocking and backs you with abandon.

We have really heard wildcat stock salesmen complain it was taking them actually four months in Boston to acquire a sizable fortune.

* * * *

Bostonians may not fall into your arms. They have a habit of estimating. If you ring true, the sky's the limit. If you sound hollow, you are simply misguided and with gentle breeding your true Bostonian will teach you the error of your ways.

Cold? No, simply good-natured tolerance. You see, Bostonians have been looked at so much by the outside, touring Philistine that it has become a habit with them to appear to be unaware of the staring.

Living in the heart of history, surrounded with objects of patriotism, born to the purple, so to speak, the Bostonian is not cold to the outsider. Let the outsider pluck up courage, approach the throne of grace, seek admittance to the things that are of the public and he will be admitted.

But as to taking a stranger home to bed with him on first acquaintance, then Boston and Bostonians may be found cool.

A man's bed is his bed. And besides, some Westerners pay too much attention to irrigating the land rather than the body.

Is Man Immortal?

That Discussion Comes as a Blessed Relief From the League of Nations

Copyright, 1920, Star Company.

All the League of Nations nonsense, by yesterday's voting, has been put safely and permanently in its little grave. Harding was elected and Cox defeated. So why not discuss what is considerably more important than the name of any successful candidate, THE IMMORTALITY OF MAN AND WHAT IS GOING TO HAPPEN TO HIM WHEN HE GETS THROUGH WITH THIS LITTLE LEASE OF LIFE, and the particular body, residence of his soul which he now dresses, if he can, in the latest fashion, and feeds on the best of food.

Edison revived the immortality discussion by his efforts to invent a physical apparatus that will enable the soul or spirit, outside the body, to express itself.

Mr. Edison will not succeed with his physical apparatus, and barring miracles, which seem not to happen in our day, barring also sincerely deceived or fraudulent mediums, there will be no talking by spirits outside of bodies. Force can act ONLY THROUGH MATTER.

Mr. Edison's effort to supply a talking machine for the spirits, like somebody else's effort to ascertain the weight of the human soul by weighing the body just before and after death, are valuable because they make us THINK of immortality, and make us realize the importance of the ONE great thing that we possess, ETERNAL LIFE that never can end, that never began; that will take us forever through a universe that is unlimited, through time, without beginning or end.

First read some of Mr. Edison's common sense. After that write what you think, and read, if you choose, the observations that we shall offer for your consideration.

What follows is taken from an interview with Mr. Edison, written by Mr. Lescarboura:

Thomas A. Edison said:

"I don't claim that our personalities pass on to another existence or sphere. I don't claim anything, because I don't know anything about the subject. For that matter, no human being knows. But I do claim that it is possible to construct an apparatus which will be so delicate that if there are personalities in another existence or sphere who wish to get in touch with us in this existence or sphere, this apparatus will at least give them a better opportunity to express themselves than the tilting tables and raps and quija boards and mediums and the other crude methods now purported to be the only means of communication.

"Now what I purpose to do is to furnish psychic investigators with an apparatus which will give a scientific aspect to their work. This apparatus, let me explain, is in the nature of a valve, so to speak. That is to say, the slightest conceivable effort is made to exert many times its initial power for indicative purposes. It is similar to a modern power house, where man, with his relatively puny one-eighth horsepower, turns a valve which starts a 50,000-horsepower steam turbine. My apparatus is along those lines, in that the slightest effort which it intercepts will be magnified many times so as to give us whatever form of record we desire for the purpose of investigation. Beyond that I don't care to say anything further regarding its nature.

"I have been working out the details for some time; indeed, a collaborator in this work died only the other day. In that he knew exactly what I am after in this work, I believe he ought to be the first to use it if he is able to do so. Of course, don't forget that I am making no claims for the survival of personality; I am not promising communication with those who have passed out of this life. I merely state that I am giving the psychic investigators an apparatus which may help them in their work, just as optical experts have given the microscope to the medical world.

Mr. Edison does not believe in the present theories of life and death. Long ago he turned his back on the various old and accepted theories because he felt that they were fundamentally wrong. And just as he experimented with one substance after another without ever becoming discouraged in his search for the filament of the first successful incandescent electric lamp, so he has searched and reasoned and built up a structure which represents his theories of what is life.

"I believe that life, like matter, is indestructible," began Mr. Edison, in outlining his theory of life and death. "There has always been a certain amount of life on this world and there will always be the same amount. You cannot create life; you cannot destroy life; you cannot multiply life.

"I believe our bodies are composed of myriads and myriads of infinitesimal entities, each in itself a unit of life, which band together to build a man. We have taken it for granted that each of us is a unit. We think of a cat, an elephant, a horse, a fish and so on as units. I am convinced that such thinking is basically wrong. All these things appear to be units only for the reason that the life entities of which I speak are far too small to be detected even with the ultra-microscope.

"I am sure that a highly organized entity, consisting of millions of electrons yet still remaining too small to be visible through any existing microscope, is possible.

"There are many indications that we human beings act as a community rather than as units. That is why I believe that each of us comprises millions upon millions of entities, and that our body and our mind represent the vote or the voice, whichever you wish to call it, of our entities.

"Now let's see why we must be composed of life's entities. Supposing you take a finger print of your thumb, in the conventional manner of police records. Then burn your thumb sufficiently to destroy the skin. Do you know that after the skin has formed the finger print of your recovered thumb will be precisely the same as the first one? Yes, absolutely the same, even down to the last line and irregularity. I tried to make sure. Here is a mystery which has remained unanswered until now.

"Of course, you say it is nature. But what is nature? That seems to me to be such an evasive reply. It means nothing. It is just a subterfuge—a convenient way of shutting off further questioning by merely giving an empty word for an answer.

"The entities live forever. You cannot destroy them, just the same, as you cannot destroy matter. So with the life entities, we cannot destroy them. They are being used over and over again, in different forms, to be sure, but they are always the same entities.

"Now we come to the matter of personality. The reason why you are Lescarboura and I am Edison is because we have different swarms or groups, or whatever you wish to call them, of entities. After eighty-two remarkable surgical operations the medical world has conclusively proved that the seat of our personality is in that part of the brain known as the fold of Broca. Now it is reasonable to suppose that the directing entities are located in that part of our bodies. Those entities, as a closely-knit ensemble, give up our mental impressions and our personality.

"I have already said that what we call death is simply the departure of the entities from our body. The whole question, in my way of thinking, is what happens to the master entities—those located in the fold of Broca. It is fair to assume that the other entities, those which have been doing purely routine work in our body, disband and go off in various directions, seeking new work to do. But how about those which have been directing the life in our body—those which are Lescarboura, Edison, Meadowcroft and so on? Do they remain together as an ensemble or do they also break up and go about the universe seeking new tasks as individuals and not as a collective body? If they break up and set out as individual entities, then I very much fear that our personality does not survive. While the life entities live forever, thus giving us the eternal life which many of us hope for, this means little to you and me if, when we come to that stage known as death, our personality simply breaks up into separate units which soon combine with others to form new structures.
